Reclamation Shifts Its Priorities

By Phil Cogswell
(c) New house News Service

Washington — The Bureau of Reclamation—praised and condemned for its efforts to bring water to arid western farmlands—no longer sees increasing irrigation as its top priority, the agency's new chief says.

"Recently we are making a very definite and deliberate shift in emphasis to power and to providing municipal and industrial water," Gilbert G. Stamm said in an interview.

Stamm, 62, was appointed commissioner by President Nixon after 27 years with the bureau. He was assistant commissioner for nine years.

Irrigation is taking a back seat because a growing population is making drinking water a scarce item in many parts of the country, Stamm indicated. In addition, the Bureau of Reclamation—like other natural resource agencies—faces major fund cutbacks over the next several years as the administration attempts to control escalating federal budgets.

The bureau's 1974 budget request is $130 million less than the amount appropriated for the 1973 fiscal year, a cut of about 25 %, Stamm said.

Producing more electricity and providing municipal and industrial water "is where the greatest need is," Stamm said. "In periods of tight fiscal constraints, we obviously want to spend these limited funds for purposes that meet the needs of the greatest number of people."

Over the next several months, he added, the bureau will be taking "a careful look at the total program" to determine which proposed projects should be built in the light of the fund cutbacks.

Many observers of recent administration budgets have remarked on the apparent desire to avoid whenever possible large new investments in public works projects, such as the dams and irrigation projects that have been the bureau's stock in trade for its 71 years of existence. Environmentalists have claimed that in its desire for development, the bureau has frequently ignored non-economic natural values.

Stamm does not believe, however, that the era of public works projects has ended.

"I think people need water—they always have and they always will," he said.

"The movements of population have been to areas where the climate is favorable and they seem to move there whether water is there or not."

The next generation, he notes, is going to grow in numbers and continue the shift in population distribution. Providing water for the dry, growing parts of the country will require a combination of techniques.

One of these is the traditional process of regulating streamflows by building dams and reservoirs to store the high runoffs for use during dry seasons.

Also needed, Stamm believes, is greater use of underground water supplies including geothermal resources—water heated by volcanic type action.

Weather modification and desalting of seawater also will become increasingly important in meeting water demands, Stamm said.

Irrigation, while gaining a lower priority, might stage a comeback in a few years, Stamm believes.

In all of its projects, Stamm emphasized, "We feel our program ought to be totally for the benefit of the people. The end product isn't the dam itself, but what we can do with the dam."

Parasol Cools Skylab

Early Worry Over Wrinkles Overcome

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — The Skylab 1 astronauts Saturday night unfurled a huge sunshield to cool their overheated space station and almost immediately the 125-degree temperatures in the cabin began dropping.

"Very good, very good," mission commander Charles Conrad Jr. exclaimed when Mission Control told the astronauts the readings were falling and that by morning they should below 100 degrees.

Conrad recommended that he and his crewmates, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz "press ahead" with a full day of work in the station Sunday, activating medical, scientific and earth resources equipment.

"We won't be riding any bicycles or anything in there, but at least we can get in and start configuring things," Conrad said. "If it gets too warm we can come up and take a rest."

He meant they could retreat to the cool safety of the Apollo command ship or two other station compartments not affected by the heat, which resulted when a protective shield ripped away during the launch of the Skylab May 14.

Conrad at first thought the astronauts had not achieved full deployment of the shield.

"We got a clean deployment of the sail, but it's not laid out the way it's supposed to be," he told Mission Control. He said there were three large wrinkles in it, much like a sail that did not inflate fully.

But after listening to the description, Jack Kinsler, a technical director at the Johnson Space Center in Houston, reported: "There is a great deal of confidence that the parasol will have a good effect on lowering the 120-degree temperatures in the overheated station.

If so, and no other problems develop, NASA officials believe Conrad, Dr. Joseph P. Kerwin and Paul J. Weitz should have a good chance of completing their four-week mission, and that Skylab 2 and 3 crews can carry out 56-day visits to the same lab later in the year.

Mission Control said Kinsler "expressed the belief that as the parasol gets warmed up by the sun the wrinkles that apparently were set . . . in the early part of deployment will flatten out."

Instead of spreading out to a rectangle 22 by 24 feet, Conrad said the shade was more of a trapezoid shape — about 12 to 14 feet at the base and 18 to 20 feet at the top end.

After listening to the astronaut's description, Mission Control told the men to retract the pole holding the device 20 feet above the Skylab so that it was flush against the hull. This was done by removing four-foot lengths of tubing.

"We don't plan to do anything more with it tonight," the capsule communicator said. "We think we got almost a full deployment and that reatracting it will do the rest for us."

Conrad and Weitz popped open the shiny aluminum and orange canopy in an effort to shade the station's outside hull and prevent it from soaking up the blistering sun heat.

The third crewman, Kerwin, watched the procedure from a window in the attached Apollo command ship, the only place in the 118-foot-long craft from which to see the outside hull of the Skylab.

Kerwin said he observed the front struts of the parasol "come up smartly, but the two back legs came up a little more slowly.

He took television pictures of the deployment, which were to be relayed later to a ground station.

"We've oscillated the rods in and out a couple strokes rapidly," Conrad reported. "It's more fully deployed in the front across the upper skirt."

Conrad and Kerwin reported it was hot in the cabin and they interrupted their sun shield work occasionally to retreat to cooler parts of the station.

"We took a heat break," said Conrad at one point.

If the job is successful, it could make possible a full 28-day mission aboard Skylab.

It followed a frustrating day Friday when they overcame docking problems but failed to open a broken solar power panel.

Conrad, Kerwin and Weitz boarded Skylab wearing masks but tests showed no poison gases were present.

As they worked to activate the space ship they marveled at the ease with which they floated and sped from place to place in weightlessness.

"Mobility around here is super," said a happy Conrad. "It turned out to work better than I'd say we even hoped for. Everything that we've been supposed to move or hustle around has been easier than we could hope for."

They also paused often to admire the view of Earth, passing by as a parade of blues, whites, greens and browns below them.

"It's kind of hard to get away from the windows, especially for the new boys," said space veteran Conrad, referring to rookies Kerwin and Weitz.

Oil-short U.S. Studies Arms Deal With 2 Arab Countries

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oil-short United States is moving toward at least $1 billion in sales of weapons and other military equipment to Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, two major oil producing Arab countries.

Pentagon officials Saturday confirmed reports of negotiations looking toward the sale of $500 million or more in arms to Saudi Arabia. Earlier, the State Department had acknowledged similar discussions with tiny Kuwait, which also is said to be seeking about $500 million of military hardware.

These developments, coming on top of more than $2 billion in arms sales deals worked out with Iran over the past couple of years, points up the growing importance of the oil-wealthy Persian Gulf area to the United States and other western nations.

The deepening oil shortage in this country adds urgency, but the United States and Russia have been maneuvering for greater influence in the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean area for several years.

"With the United Kingdom having terminated its former protective role in the area, those countries have a greater responsibility for their own security," a State Department spokesman said earlier this week.

"Our policy is to assist them in this, through sales of reasonable quantities of military equipment and services appropriate to their needs."

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have been lined up on the other side of the Arab-Israeli dispute from the United States.

Iran has been an ally of the United States for a long time and the Russians and other European Communist countries have been supporting the leftist regime in Iraq for many years.

In recent months, the Russians have sent the Iraqis a number of missile-firing patrol boats which could give Baghdad significant naval clout in the Persian Gulf.

Communist Czechoslovakia, meanwhile, is reported by U.S. intelligence to have completed a new pact under which it will provide the Iraqis about $80 million in military gear.

Saudi Arabia is understood to be in the market for U.S. destroyer-type naval vessels. As many as 19 such ships may change hands. The United States has been mothballing older destroyers and some of these could become available.

Apart from the Western-Communist rivalry, the Persian Gulf area is a cockpit of disputes among the countries ringing it.

Iran and Iraq have been feuding over disputed territory for many years and Iraq two months ago moved into a stretch of Kuwait territory, apparently in an effort to safeguard a new port being developed with Russian help at Um Qasr.

The Saudi Arabians apparently are also interested in buying military hardware from other Western countries. Within recent weeks, U.S. sources have reported that Saudi Arabia intends to buy 30 new Jaguar supersonic fighters being built jointly by the British and the French. The Jaguars, designed for sophisticated ground-attack capability, will cost about $120 million. In addition the Saudi Arabians have about 50 F5 International fighters on order from the United States.

Kuwait, whose weakness was demonstrated by the ease of Iraq's takeover of its territory, is said to be negotiating for more than 30 U.S. F8 Crusader jetfighters; about 160 M60 tanks; anti-aircraft weapons, and helicopters, among other things.

Beyond the oil shortage problem and the East-West rivalry, large-scale sale of American arms would ease the American balance-of-payments gap and help U.S. defense industries.

Experience Said To Be No Help In Wifely Concern for Astronauts

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Sorry, Shirley, but you were wrong.

It gets tougher, not easier. Experience is no help. Veterans and rookies agonize alike.

Jane Conrad says so, and she knows. This is her fourth time around.

So the wifely concern was proportionate Saturday as Skylab 1 astronauts Charles Conrad Jr., Dr. Joseph Kerwin and Paul Weitz struggled to repair the crippled space station and salvage their 28-day mission.

The fate of the $2.6 billion scientific venture rested in the balance.

"Let's face it," said Shirley Kerwin. "I'm very much a space novice. I'm just guessing, but I don't imagine Jane Conrad is as concerned. She's been through this before. But for a novice like me, it's a little hairy."

Jane couldn't agree less.

"I don't think it ever gets any easier," said the wife of the flight commander, a veteran of two Gemini missions and the third Apollo astronaut to explore the moon.

"This is the toughest one by far," she added. "Every time is nearly exactly like the first time. . . . it's no easier."

Jane, Shirley and Suzanne Weitz expressed confidence that the crew would heal the Skylab wounds that turned the orbital workshop into a space oven.

"I'm sure they'll work it out and stay up there for the full length of the mission," Mrs. Kerwin said. "I may not last that long, but I'm sure they will."

She and daughters Sharon, 9, Joanna, 7, and Kristina, 5, stuck around home Saturday, monitoring the rescue efforts on squawk boxes and splashing in the family swimming pool.

Meanwhile, the four lively Conrad boys, ranging in age from 18 to 12, plotted their next madcap adventure.

During the Gemini days, they performed for television cameras by riding bikes into the pool and umbrellas off the roof. On Apollo 12 they had become gliding enthusiasts.

Now they're motorcycle racing buffs.

"It seems to be an inborn thing," Mrs. Conrad said of the youthful fascination for speed and fast machines. "Pete used to race motorcycles when he was 15 or so and I guess my boys all took after him."

It was quiet at the Weitz home where Suzanne and her children, Matthew, 14, and Cynthia, 11, tuned in the radio exchanges between crew and flight controllers.

Soviet Glacier Stirs; Floods Expected

©The New York Times

Moscow — Soviet authorities have begun evacuating inhabitants of a remote central Asian valley threatened by floods caused by a rapidly advancing mountain glacier.

The emergency in the Vanch Valley of the Pamir Highland, known as the "Roof of the World," was disclosed in the Soviet press as the Bear Glacier, an eight-mile-long tongue of ice, began stirring after having been quiet for 10 years.

The advancing glacier front is 500 feet high and a third of a mile wide.

The Soviet Union's Tadzhik Republic, in which the imperiled valley is situated, has girded itself for a repetition of a destructive flood of 1963 in which a huge mass of melt-water and debris swept through the valley. The valley has a population of about 10,000.

Early evacuation of residents from low-lying areas and other emergency measures prevented any significant loss of life in 1963, according to Soviet reports, and officials are confident advance precautions taken this time will be equally effective.

The threat to the valley derives not from the glacier itself, but from huge temporary mountain lakes that have been building up in side valleys as the rapidly surging stream of ice plugged up valley mouths.

The phenomenon is said to be caused by the accumulation of ice at the head of the glacier, causing tremendous pressures to set the glacier periodically into rapid motion.

The movement of mountain glaciers is usually so slow as to be imperceptible to the eye. The normal rate of the Bear Glacier has been about 500 feet a year. During the surges, at roughly 10-year intervals, it has moved as much as 30 feet a day.

Argentina Frees 600 Political Prisoners

Argentina's new Peronist government freed nearly 600 political prisoners from jail Saturday and announced that workers might be given emergency salary increases Many of those freed had been convicted of guerrilla terrorism.

Predawn rioting outside the Villa Devoto prison, where 186 of the prisoners were held, took the lives of two teen-age boys. Eight other persons were injured and 100 young people arrested before the crowd was dispersed.

In Cordoba, hundreds of demonstrators gathered outside the provincial jail demanding a release of political prisoners there

Authorities said that in the confusion, 50 common criminals, including convicted killers, escaped into the streets, seizing automobiles for their getaway

Ireland on Both Sides of Border Sets Ballots

While the bombs and the bomb scares are still disrupting Belfast and Dublin, Ireland on both sides of the border is taking a look at the ballot box.

In Northern Ireland, the electorate is about to choose a new system of local government. In the Irish republic across the border, the race is for a new presidency

Both votes take place Wednesday Both involve Irish people, in some cases within shouting distance of each other. But the elections might as well be a million miles apart

Terrorists Saturday fired a rocket into a predominantly Roman Catholic area of Belfast and bombs exploded in four other communities in Northern Ireland The targets included a factory, shopping center, hotel, pub and newspaper.

The flurry of attacks came as British officers disclosed security forces are using infra-red aerial photography developed by the United States in Vietnam to detect bombs planted by the outlawed Irish Republican Army (IRA) to kill British troops.

FTC to Limit Plastic Insulator Use

NATION

The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) has unanimously agreed to limit the use of popular plastic foam insulators that produce highly poisonous fumes when heated, informed sources said Saturday. The plastics have been used for insulation in high-rise buildings, airplane interiors and in the trouble-plagued Skylab.

Traces of poisons produced when the foams burn have been found in the bloodstreams of persons killed in airplane accidents although poisoning never has been listed as the cause of death.

No details were immediately available on what specific plastics were involved in the FTC limitation or what curbs would be placed on their use. But one source close to the FTC said the five-member commission's investigation centered on polyurethane, polystyrene and the cellular plastics.

New Flu Trouble Detected in Far East

The National Center for Disease control(NCDC) said Saturday a marked antigenic shift in the influenza-B virus has been detected in the Far East, signaling possible trouble for Americans in the next flu season.

The NCDC said the new strains were isolated in Hong Kong, the birthplace of the potent Hong Kong A-2 flu virus of five years ago that caused a worldwide epidemic and struck millions of Americans.

Fire Races Unchecked Through Cypress Swamp

A fire that has spread across 11,000 acres in Florida in the last three days raged unchecked through the big cypress swamp Saturday and rangers said the only hope of stopping it soon was heavy rain or a windshift. More than 75 men battled the fire, 70 miles west of Miami, with shovels and axes, but bulldozers and other heavy equipment they needed were useless in the heavy undergrowth and mushy terrain.

More Funds Released For Summer Youth Jobs

The Labor Department released an additional $33 million for summer jobs for youths Saturday, but drew criticism from Rep. George O'Brien, R-Ill., for withholding $239 million in Neighborhood Youth Corps funds.

Sabotage Investigated In Train Explosion

The Army said Saturday the 500-pound bombs that exploded inside a munitions train last week only could have been ignited by temperatures exceeding those of a naturally-caused fire.

Paul Stroll, public information director at Ft. Huachuca, Ariz., said the temperatures would need to reach 532 degrees Fahrenheit before the M82 bombs would burn and 662 degrees before they could explode. "That sort of temperature is almost impossible to achieve except under laboratory conditions," he said.

The FBI is investigating the possibility of sabotage aboard 12 freight cars that were destroyed in a mushroom of smoke and fire Thursday night.

Prosecutors Conclude Ellsberg Caper Factor Behind Cover-up

From News Wires

Washington — Federal prosecutors now have evidence directly linking H R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman, former top White House advisers, to illegal activities against Dr. Daniel Ellsberg in 1971, the New York Times reported sources close to the Watergate investigation disclosed Saturday.

The prosecutors have concluded, the sources said, those activities were a major factor behind the decision at the White House to cover up the Watergate bugging a year later.

This theory of prosecution, for the first time linking the two aides directly to illegal activities against Ellsberg, was described by the sources as the heart of the government's prospective case against Haldeman, who resigned last month as President Nixon's chief of staff, and Ehrlichman, who resigned as his top domestic adviser.

The theory was outlined to Archibald Cox, the newly appointed special Watergate prosecutor in his meeting with the federal prosecutors this week

Young Testimony

The sources disclosed damaging evidence against Haldeman and Ehrlichman was recently presented to the federal grand jury here by David Young Jr., the former National Security Council aide. He served as co-director of the so-called "plumbers team" that was authorized by President Nixon to stop leaks of information after publication of the pentagon papers in June, 1971. Young testified to the grand jury after being given partial immunity at the prosecutors request last May 16, the sources said.

The prosecutors further believe, the sources said, that they can prove key officials of the White House knew at the time they were committed certain undercover activities against Ellsberg were illegal. These activities included a break-in September, 1971, at the office of his former psychiatrist in Los Angeles.

The prosecutors are also known to believe, the sources said, President Nixon's statement last Tuesday on the Watergate cover-up was designed, in the words of one official, "to provide an umbrella of national security for Haldeman and Ehrlichman"

United Press International reported authoritative sources said Saturday Ehrlichman has sworn he learned some weeks ago John Mitchell and other key officials secretly discussed a specific proposal for bugging the Democrats' Watergate offices early in 1972

The sources said Ehrlichman testified he was told the plan for electronic surveillance at the Watergate was brought up at the last of a series of three or four meetings arranged to discuss campaign intelligence gathering.

The first of these meetings was said to have taken place late in December 1971 or early in January 1972 and to have been attended by Mitchell, then attorney general; White House counsel John Dean; Jeb Magruder, the deputy manager of President Nixon's reelection campaign; and G. Gordon Liddy, a former White House aide.

Some or all of these four persons were said to have been present at the later meetings and Ehrlichman said he was told Mitchell definitely was at the one where the Watergate bugging proposal was discussed — in February or March of 1972.

The sources said they could not positively say who Ehrlichman had identified as the source for his information, but that they thought he said it had come mainly from Magruder.

Less Specific

The sources said Haldeman, who resigned April 30 as White House chief of staff, was said to have testified separately along the same lines, although with less specific information.

Both Haldeman and Ehrlichman, who also resigned his White House job April 30, were said to have provided their information in making pre-trial depositions this week in the Democrats' $6.4 million civil damage suit against the Committee for the Reelection of the President.

For their part, Haldeman and Ehrlichman both denied they themselves had any advance knowledge of the Watergate conspiracy, the sources said, adding however, that both former presidential aides refused to answer any questions about an alleged effort to cover up the June 17, 1972, incident.

In other developments:

— A "chilling" White House plan to bug, burglarize and blackmail antiwar activists was briefly "operational" in 1970 until it was rejected by former FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, according to Newsweek Magazine. In its edition for release today, Newsweek reports the sweeping secret police plan would have pooled the services of the FBI, CIA, National Security Agency and Defense Intelligence Agency to spy on militants believed fomenting domestic unrest

— Former New Jersey financier Robert Vesco, now a fugitive from the United States living in Costa Rica, reportedly wants to join the Watergate chorus The Los Angeles Times reported from Nassau, the Bahamas, Saturday Vesco wants to meet Cox to to tell his side of the story about a secret $200,000 cash contribution to Nixon's re-election campaign.

Fake Falcons Shot Anyway

Rocklin, Calif (UPI) — The peregrine falcon is endangered — both in its natural state and in clay

Art instructor Jim Adamson of Sierra College reports that he made 10 clay replicas of the endangered bird last September and wired them to the tops of utility poles around Rocklin, Vallejo and Sacramento

He found that two of the clay birds were blown to bits by gun blasts and four others stolen from their high perches

Adamson said he put the clay falcons on display to give passersby the thrill of seeing one of the near extinct birds and to show that "hunters don't care as long as they get something"

Senators to Probe U.S. Energy Crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee announced Saturday that it will hold its first hearings this week on international aspects of the U S energy crisis

A subcommittee meanwhile is to undertake a detailed study of international oil companies, the chairman said.

Chairman J. W. Fulbright, D-Ark., said that the panel's subcommittee on multinational corporations, headed by Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho, will undertake the detailed study

The full committee's initial hearings, scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday, will deal with the political, military, security and economic aspects of the energy question.

"In the former category," Fulbright said, "questions relate to the political relationship between oil and the Arab-Israeli dispute, the apparent prospect of severe competition for oil among the wealthy consuming nations and also the strategic interests and intentions of the Soviet Union.

"In the economic category," he added, "questions relate to our ability to obtain oil from foreign nations at a reasonable price, our ability to pay for a greatly increased volume of petroleum imports and the effect of a dramatically expanded world oil trade upon current efforts to develop a new and workable international monetary system"

Witnesses will include Deputy Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon and James E. Akins, director of the Office of Fuels and Energy of the State Department, Fulbright said.

U.S., French Hope to Warm Relations

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (AP) — Here on the edge of the Arctic President Nixon and President Georges Pompidou will meet this week in hopes of warming up French-American relations.

They will arrive late Wednesday for two days of talks that will cover international currency, trade and political problems of the transatlantic alliance. They also will discuss the Middle East, East-West relations and very likely the prospects of defense and nuclear weapons cooperation.

Nixon and Pompidou chose to meet here because neither felt it expedient to show up in the other's capital at this time. Pompidou, in proud Gaullist style, reckons it is Nixon's turn to show up in Paris because Pompidou last visited Washington. Nixon is reserving a journey to Europe for the fall when he plans to swing through several capitals.

The cool Icelandic setting does more than symbolize the less-than-warm American-French relationship. It also makes for easier security control.

This capital city's 200-member police contingent is being reinforced by units from all over Iceland.

In collaboration with the French and U.S. secret services, the Icelanders have set out to reduce the risks of demonstrations and incidents to a minimum this week.

Both Nixon and Pompidou will be accompanied by their own security men as well as secretaries, code clerks, cooks and communications experts.

For all the preoccupations with security, it seems likely that Iceland's Communist-oriented Peoples Alliance party will hold a demonstration protesting what to them are the negative aspects of U.S. and French policy.

Iceland is ruled by a coalition government in which two of the seven Cabinet ministers are Communists.

However, Icelandic authorities are equally resolved to keep all demonstrators clear of the conference center itself.

This is at a newly built steel and concrete museum — the Kjarvalsstadir — opened last month to honor the memory of the artist Johannes S. Kjarval.

One entire gallery is being reorganized to accommodate the two presidents and their top advisers. The gallery, about 150 feet long and 40 feet wide, is being divided into three separate rooms, carpeted and especially furnished. But thus far no tables or chairs or pictures have been brought in.

Cod War Takes Violent Turn

From News Wires

Reykjavik, Iceland — An Icelandic gunboat Saturday opened fire and hit a British trawler in disputed fishing waters off Iceland. Crewmen on the stricken ship were struggling to keep her from sinking.

The trawler, the Everton, was reported taking on more water than her pump could handle. Other British fishing boats were standing by. No casualties were reported.

The British Foreign Office said it viewed the shooting incident with "utmost gravity." The British Trawler Federation described the shooting as "an act of war."

Political sources said the incident meant a dangerous escalation of the British-Icelandic "cod war" which already has prompted Britain to send in its navy to protect British trawlers fishing inside the 50 nautical mile limit.

The sources said the incident could endanger further attempts to solve the conflict by peaceful negotiations. The Icelandic government said earlier there could be no talks on a solution as long as British naval vessles are inside the limit.

The Iceland coast guard said it fired into the hull of the fishing boat only after it repeatedly ignored warning shots and orders to stop.

The Everton was understood to have a crew of about 20 plus a reporter from a London newspaper. Its skipper was identified as George Mussell, 40.

Midwest Storm Death Toll 7

Associated Press

At least seven persons were killed Saturday as a wide-ranging line of tornadoes and violent thunderstorms swept through Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma.

Three members of a Wichita, Kan., family drowned on Cheney Reservoir, about 25 miles west of Wichita, when their fishing boat was swept into the air by an apparent funnel and then capsized. Only one body had been recovered by late Saturday night and the names of the victims had not been released.

Four members of a Keefeton, Okla., family were killed and a fifth critically injured when a tornado struck the small northeast Oklahoma town Saturday. Fifteen other persons were injured.

Authorities said Charles Dornan, his wife Sue and their daughters, Beverly and Linda, were killed when the family truck, en route to the safety of a storm cellar, was picked up by the tornado funnel and carried half a mile before being dropped into a ditch. A third daughter, Goldy, was in critical condition at Muskogee General Hospital.

About 150 homes were destroyed or heavily damaged as tornadoes swept through northeast Oklahoma Close to 40 homes in Keefeton and ten units of a tourist court near Locust Grove were destroyed. Tornado sightings were reported near Claremore, Broken Arrow, Chouteau, Grand Lakes and Beggs, Okla.

The Weather Service reported funnel sightings at four places in Boone County, 60 mile-per-hour winds at the northern Kansas City suburb of Gladstone and hail ranging from one inch in diameter to baseball-size in areas south of Kansas City

Oil Undamaged After N-Blast

Bio Blanco, Colo (UPI) — Preliminary data from last week's underground nuclear blast in western Colorado shows it did not damage the vast oil shale deposits in the area, scientists said

"Preliminary data indicates that the (shock) effect at the well extended more than 150 feet but less than 600 feet down," Dr Charles Williams of the Atomic Energy Commission (AEC) said

The Project Rio Blanco detonation — equal to 90,000 tons of TNT — was designed to create a cavern more than a mile underground and free natural gas trapped in the tight sandstone formations.

Codeine, Morphine Shortage Foreseen

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — President Nixon's much publicized all-out war against the illegal narcotics traffic is having an unforeseen side effect:

There is a growing threat of a serious shortage of opium-based narcotic drugs of important therapeutic value, including a new one that is proving useful in fighting heroin addiction.

This bombshell was dropped last week by a Georgetown Unviersity pharmacologist and physician, Dr. William Beaver, at a symposium on drug abuse sponsored by the National Academy of Sciences at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill.

Beaver asserted that United States "policies directed at discouraging or totally eliminating the cultivation of the opium poppy in various countries such as Turkey" is resulting in "an incipient shortage of opium alkaloids and their semi-synthetic derivatives."

Among the therapeutically important drugs that threaten to become scarce, he said, are morphine and codeine.

Morphine has been used as a pain killer since 1803, when it was first isolated from opium. Codeine taken by mouth has been used for more than 100 years for the treatment of less severe pain

Many synthetics have been introduced as morphine substitutes, but "none have been shown to be generally superior to morphine in the relief of severe pain," Beaver said. Of codeine, he said it "is generally considered, with the possible exception of aspirin to be the most useful mild analgesic.

Demand for codeine, Beaver said, "is so great that it is the first alkaloid whose supply will be jeopardized by the opium shortage."

Also threatened with shortage, according to Beaver, are Naloxone and Nalorphine, two so-called "heroin antagonists".

These work differently from heroin substitutes such as the controversail drug methadone, blocking the action of heroin rather than taking its place.

Presidential Helicopter Crashes

Miami (AP) — A Secret Service agent was killed and six others escaped serious injury Saturday night in a crash of a presidential helicopter off Grand Cay, Bahamas, the Secret Service said

Neither President Nixon, who was visiting the island nor any members of his family were aboard

The name of the dead agent was being withheld pending notification of his family the Secret Service spokesman in Washington said

"The men were going to relieve the agents on the island. It was a new shift," the spokesman said.

He could not say whether the craft was one in which the President has flown.

SUNDAY JOURNAL AND STAR OPINION

Brezhnev as Nixon's Ally

It is a thought to give one pause — the leader of the Soviet Union riding to the rescue of Richard Nixon, probably the No. 1 anti-Communist of this generation.

Yet there can be little doubt that Leonid Brezhnev, top man in the Kremlin, could if he chose deliver a blow that might well be fatal to the political career of the President of the United States.

For if Brezhnev should announce he is calling off his planned visit to Washington because of the Watergate scandal, this would be strong proof that the U.S. government had become immobilized in foreign affairs and the Nixon presidency no longer able to function effectively.

Brezhnev, of course, has done the exact opposite. He shrugged off Watergate and said his June meeting with Mr. Nixon will go on as planned.

Obviously the Soviet chief is not merely being kind to a fellow world leader.

Some will assume, naturally, that Brezhnev expects to drive a harder bargain in any dealings with Mr. Nixon because the latter will be negotiating from a position of weakness.

This assumption does not bear up under careful scrutiny, however. If anything, a President under criticism from Congress and the people because of the Cambodian bombing and wrongdoing in his administration will be under even greater pressure to make sure any deal he hammers out with the Soviets is advantageous to this country.

This is not to say Brezhnev has no strong self-interest in going through with the Washington summit.

Crop failures coupled with a pledge to improve living conditions in the Soviet Union make it essential that the U.S.S.R. expand trade with America. His own commitments within the Kremlin hierarchy make it vital that Brezhnev carry through his policy of detente with the West successfully.

And President Nixon is a key to meeting both needs. He is the one Brezhnev has worked with in laying the foundation for trade and detente. A repudiation of Mr. Nixon by the American people at this time could amount to a repudiation of his policies. Mr. Nixon is, as it were, Brezhnev's man in the White House.

To grasp fully what this means, consider the alternative. If Brezhnev didn't have Mr. Nixon, whom would he have? Vice President Agnew. And there is no evidence Mr. Agnew would pursue either detente or trade with the same enthusiasm and success.

Thus Brezhnev has a stake in Mr. Nixon's survival.

So, of course, do the American people. There is no indication at this time that Mr. Nixon has been so impaired by Watergate he cannot follow through on what he has already accomplished in this field. And it is in the American interest that further advances be sought in detente and trade.

In spite of Watergate, then, Mr. Nixon should enter the June talks with Brezhnev supported by the American people.

Meat-Worker Militancy

Within a month, the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen will head for the bargaining table. And no 5.5% limit on pay hikes for them, they vow.

Jesse Prosten, head of the union's packinghouse division, calls the administration's economic program "phony as a $9 bill" and declares: "We will be guided in bargaining by the needs of packinghouse workers, not by pay guidelines."

Maybe the meat workers do need more than a 5.5% increase, if their own incomes are to keep up with inflation. Certainly their productivity has risen greatly. Marketable meat per man-hour of labor has about doubled in the past 15 years.

But if the workers do gain a pay boost in excess of the guidelines, it's almost a foregone conclusion that consumers will see the results at the supermarket meat counters.

And no matter how much housewives may feel like protesting these higher prices, it won't do a bit of good to march on the ranches and feedlots of mid-America.

ART BUCHWALD

Taking Minds off Watergate

Washington — My friend Moonslinger is a skeptic by nature. We were having a drink together at the Press Club and he said, "Nixon's credibility has reached a new low. You don't know what to believe any more."

"I always believe the President. That's how I was brought up."

"Yeah, but every day witnesses say Nixon knew more about Watergate than he did the day before."

"We used to have a saying in France," I told Moonslighner, "'Hanoi soit mal y pense' which means 'Evil to him who thinks evil.'"

"Don't you have it any more?" Moonslighner asked.

"Not since Pompidou was elected."

"Well, anyway," he persisted, "what worries me is, if we can't believe the President on watergate, how can we believe him on Vietnam? How can we be sure we have 'Peace with Honor'?"

I said angrily, "The President would never lie to us about something like THAT."

"But just suppose there isn't any 'Peace with Honor' and the South and North Vietnamese are still fighting?"

"Impossible. After 10 years we have achieved a peace in Indochina everyone can live with."

"But let's say, just for argument's sake, that something went wrong. Suppose after Kissinger's meeting in Paris with Le Duc Tho, the President goes on the air and says he has just received new information that we don't have 'Peace with Honor.' Will the American people believe him?"

"Of course they will."

"All right, let's go one step further. Suppose he says because of this new information he will be obligated to start bombing North Vietnam again because he doesn't want to be the first impeached President in history to lose a war?"

"Then the American people will have to support him, unless, of course, you want Cambodia to fall."

"Nobody wants Cambodia to fall. But because of the President's credibility problem, many Americans may not believe him when he says he has to bomb again. This could bring students and demonstrators into the streets."

"That's where the President likes them. He wants his enemies out there where he can see them."

"Okay, then you have demonstrations, riots, arrests, Jane Fonda. The President declares a national emergency and, whammo, everyone forgets about Watergate."

"Moonslighner, are you trying to tell me the President would bomb North Vietnam to take our minds off a domestic scandal?"

"All I can tell you is when Nixon goes on the air in a few weeks and says, 'My fellow Americans,' the North Vietnamese had better head for their bomb shelters."

"Moonslinger," I said, "the trouble with you is that just because of a third-rate burglary at the Watergate you've lost your faith in the leaders of our land."

Bright Future For Nebraska

In the course of a hearing on the appointment of an individual to the Nebraska Economic Development Commission, legislative committee Chairman Sen. Ramey Whitney asked the appointee his opinion of the future of Nebraska and what might be done to enhance it.

That is a pretty tough one to field right out of the blue but the appointee did come up with at least a beginning. Nebraska's water, he said, and its location are its future.

He is right and it isn't too difficult to see the logic of such thinking. There are other natural resources that might be added to water, those including clean air, productive land and open space.

Then, there are a great many more or less intangible assets such as our human resources, our generally low-keyed way of life and a considerable natural beauty. All of these and no doubt many more that others might easily chronicle are things that will contribute to the future well-being of Nebraska and its people.

We have, in other words, a good supply of the prerequisites of new business and industry and growth of the local economy. And what can we do to make the best of these things?

This is where the role of the Legislature is so important. If we waste our water, if we allow the pollution of our air, if we encourage the exploitation of our working people, if we disdain our agricultural productivity, if we ignore our natural assets and the needs and desires of our people, then we will not be utilizing those things that might make our future promising.

All of these things come ultimately into the lap of state senators in the form of appropriations that seek to further the effective utilization of our assets and proposed laws that seek to manage the affairs of the state's economy.

Specifics include such things as appropriations for land and water conservation, for recreational needs, for transportation development, for education, for cultural affairs, etc. The specifics include an equitable tax system for the rich and the poor, a minimum standard of living for everyone, a decent wage for the working man, the protection of consumers, equal rights for employers and labor unions and many more.

The Legislature deals constantly with all of these things but does it always recognize their importance, is it always willing to stand up and be counted when needed, does it approach them all with complete integrity, without undue consideration of special interests? This state does have a tremendous future but only if the individuals living in it have the capacity to see and work for its realization.

Vietnam Peace-Keeping: An Exercise In Futility

By Richard Blystone
Associated Press Writer

Saigon (AP) — The International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS) plods toward the end of its fourth month in Vietnam, having supervised little and controlled nothing.

Hopes that attended its founding are among its casualties since the signing of a cease-fire in Vietnam Jan. 27 in Paris.

Instead of watching a reconciliation, the ICCS is trying to keep out of the way of shells and bullets. It is powerless, divided and broke.

Internal deadlocks along cold war lines have paralyzed it, and Vietnamese authorities on both sides have obstructed it.

Canadian, Hungarian, Indonesian and Polish soldiers have been penned in, blocked out, cursed at, shot at, overworked, bored.

Living under conditions that range from a Florida retirement village to Devil's Island, they have acquired suntans, laquerware, special pay, malaria. But they have achieved little else. The commission is reported to have completed fewer than a dozen unanimous reports and had four men killed.

"I've been on three peacekeeping missions, and this is the worst by a long way," said one Canadian officer who asked for anonymity. Others had even stronger remarks.

It has not been easy for any of the member nations, but the Canadians — credited with most of what little has been accomplished — seem affected most by the frustration of Vietnam.

Many favor going home. Others believe their efforts are worthwhile — if only because things would be worse without them.

Restraining Effect

Former U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker acknowledged in a farewell address that the ICCS "has not been able to function as effectively as we had hoped."

But, he added: "Its presence has had a restraining effect on both sides . . . Despite frustrations, it is my hope that they will recognize that their presence may be vital if the international community is to have any ability whatever to prevent main-force warfare from recurring again in South Vietnam."

The Canadian government decides the end of this month whether to quit. Meanwhile Canadians are trying to make the best of the situation.

In Long Khanh Province, two Canadian captains drive the back roads, "showing the ICCS flag" and conducting "initial observations" as soon as possible after incidents are reported by South Vietnamese.

The Indonesians from their team site often go along. The Poles and Hungarians do not. The East Europeans say they want security guarantees from both sides and opportunity to talk to both parties, for objectivity.

"You can't argue with that second," said Capt. Ian Patten of Toronto. "But at the same time you can't just stand still.

"You've got to get there right after an incident happens — before all the holes have been filled in and the bodies have been taken away. If you wait five or six weeks for an investigation — or even two or three days — if a house was burned all you see is charred ruins and if there's blood on the ground and somebody says it's cow's blood, how do you know?"

Team observation reports will not get beyond a file cabinet unless there's a formal investigation. So far Saigon alone has claimed more than 14,000 truce violations. There have been more than 330 ICCS investigations and about 75 reports forwarded to the Vietnamese Joint Military Commission.

The same high official says he believes the Canadians have had some effectiveness in "reserving the right to inform world public opinion about what is going on." Canada's self-styled "open-mouth policy" has to some degree broken the pattern of official secrecy in Vietnam, but except for anti-Canada blasts from Communist broadcasts it has little concrete effect.

By now, according to the Paris agreement, Saigon and the Viet Cong's Provisional Revolutionary Government should have been well on their way toward holding elections to decide South Vietnam's political future, with the ICCS looking on.

Recently, finances joined in the list of ICCS headaches.

"We owe far more than we have in the bank," said one commission source. "We have less than $100,000 in the bank . . . Our bill to Air America alone now is $750,000."

'This is peace-keeping patrol 3. We need an air strike.'

The United States eased the financial problem last week by advancing $1 million to the commission. Sources said the South Vietnamese government is expected to match the U.S. contribution.

Many authorities express the view the ICCS was doomed from the start because prospects for unanimity seemed dim.

ICCS sources say the only final reports on which unanimity has been reached are those that put blame for violations on South Vietnamese. The others have been split, frequently with Canada and Indonesia agreeing.

Collusion Charged

One high Canadian official in Saigon went so far as to say the East Europeans had been in "open collusion" with the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong.

Another Canadian source complained the Poles and Hungarians have made such assertions during investigations that a clearly blown-up bridge "must have collapsed."

A Polish delegation spokesman declined comment on complaints of East European obstruction or reported discord within the ICCS.

The Poles and Hungarians have spoken out rarely and are seldom accessible to reporters. Of the Canadians' "open-mouth" policy, the Polish spokesman said, "they have a right to hold press conferences but no duty to do so. All other delegations have a right to their own choice whether to speak or not to speak."

One Indonesian office said he did not believe the Poles and Hungarians are deliberately obstructing the commission, rather "that they have to ask their governments' instructions on any important thing on which the ICCS ought to act quickly."

However, sources from all quarters of the ICCS agreed that whatever the commission's internal situation it cannot be effective unless both Vietnamese sides decide they really want peace and reconciliation.

A Canadian source said the ICCS at Ben Het in the highlands is restricted to an area of 80 square feet and that the compound is surrounded by hills and vegetation that limit "observation" to a half-mile.

The situation was a little better at Duc Co, another border station in Viet Cong country of the southern highlands, recently evacuated because of malaria. Members there said they could walk from their hut along a one-mile airstrip and up a nearby hill. Everything else is seeded with mines.

At Hue, in the bar of a ramshackle compound formerly used by the U.S. Army, Canadians stare into their beers and banter with Vietnamese barmaids. Hungarians and Poles sit apart at tables.

Tense to Cordial

Relations between ICCS members in the field range from tense to cordial. One of the better spots is Xuan Loc, 35 miles east of Saigon, where team members live in air-conditioned trailers in a compound graced by tropical flowers and a croquet court.

Capt. Patten, senior of two Canadians there, says: "When we're in the conference room it's business. When we get out of the conference room it's a good working relationship. We're very fortunate. We're not frustrated. We work 18 hours a day. There's plenty to do."

Patten keeps on his desk a three-inch piece of shrapnel. A South Vietnamese official plucked it from the head of a 13-year-old boy who lay still clutching the string of a kite he had been flying when Viet Cong shells hit his refugee village.

"Situations like that just make you want to grab hold of somebody and break their neck," said Patten. "But it also makes you think there's a job here for the ICCS."

Lincoln — Regarding the Game and Parks Commission roads plan for Indian Cave State Park:

Tom Vint's story (Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star, April 22) identified both the Sierra Club and Wachiska Audubon Society with the emotional reaction of a single Sierra member who was quoted, "No, this is our area! Can't they leave anything alone?"

The Wachiska Audubon Society has taken no collective position on the plan. However, at its April 12 meeting members questioned Chuck Duncan of Game and Parks regarding the wisdom of extending roads the entire length of the park.

Certainly, roads would only take up a tiny percentage of the area's 3,000 acres, but the influence of a road extends for hundreds of yards on either side. This influence would be extreme in a long, narrow park like Indian Cave, which is about a mile wide in most places. Motorized and "natural" activities are incompatible in close proximity. The simple solution is to devote separate areas to each pursuit, a considerable distance apart.

Games and Parks might well consider this approach, especially in light of two trends: the inevitably increasing scarcity of gasoline which will tend to curtail automobile vacationing and the dwindling reserve of wild lands.

Instead of pre-empting the majority of Indian Cave's beauty spots for the automobile, why not encourage people to experience the park on its own terms? Keep auto-related activities in the north half of the park where there are already deeply-eroded roads in need of improvement, and where traffic could be regulated from park headquarters.

The cave itself, an interesting feature far outshone by the park's lovely river overlooks, ridge and ravine landscapes and unique flora and fauna, could be reached by a quite level paved footpath. Such footpaths are used in Rocky Mountain National Park.

If we consider our Nebraska scenic spots comparable to such places, let us be equally careful to make sure they are not cheapened.

It has consistently been, and will continue to be, our intention to work "with the majority instead of against it" to "produce better end products for coexistence," as Vint suggested. In return we hope he will be more careful in representing our intentions to the public.

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

The Omaha World Herald cites as "a prime example" of special interest legislation Sen. Terry Carpenter's amendment to equalize liquor delivery charges statewide.

"Carpenter is always in the forefront of attempts to set prices by law, require uniform mark-ups to deny bargains to consumers, and parcel out advantages to various segments of the liquor industry.

"It takes a considerable amount of gall to be the leader of these legislative forays, because Carpenter is in the liquor business himself," the editor wrote.

Still supporting a move to give Hiram Scott College facilities to the University of Nebraska — a bill vetoed by Gov. J. J. Exon — the editor of the Scottsbluff Star Herald editorially disclosed that the "behind-the-scenes maneuvering since Exon's veto of LB179 has been considerable.

"We are told by reliable sources that some of the Board of College Trustees are willing to back off from their opposition to the Scottsbluff facility, except for Chadron State College officials. Perhaps spurred by concern over their budgets and the bill to legalize various degrees now offered by the normal schools, the College Board recently considered taking official action of rescinding its LB179 opposition. But the howl created by Chadron State College, we are told, caused the board to back down.

"The horse trading in Lincoln isn't over yet," the editor wrote.

The plight of the state's four state colleges, subject of criticism by the American Assn. of University Professors which blamed the situation on the state's slowness to develop a sound plan of coordination for higher education, prompted editorial words from the Kearney Daily Hub:

"Without assigned missions . . . the colleges and universities are placed in a very unacademic position — that of competing for students in order to stay alive. In one respect the situation takes the 'heat' off the Legislature, which historically has shown little stomach for closing an educational institution for which a sound need is not found."

Action by the Nebraska Jaycees in voting against endorsing female membership in their organization brought criticism from the Sidney Telegraph.

"Such forms of discrimination are legal and entirely within the rights of the organizations themselves. But it is difficult to understand how men of good will, who are supposedly devoted to love, progress, brotherhood and enlightenment, can allow them to persist," the editor wrote.

Catholics, Protestants

Leaders Troubled By Religious Rift

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp break smoldered Saturday between the nation's principal Roman Catholic and Protestant organizations. Leaders of both were keenly troubled by it. At least temporarily, it cut of liaison between them.

Behind the rift between the U.S. Catholic Conference and the National Council of Churches were questions of manners and adherence to agreed mutual consultations on controversial issues — in this case, proposed tax credits for church schools.

"It's highly unfortunate," said the Rev. Dr. David Hunter, deputy general secretary of the council, cooperative arm of most major Orthodox and Protestant denominations. "We made an error and we deeply regret it."

Bishop James S. Rausch, general secretary of the U.S. Catholic Conference, the joint agency of American Catholicism, said: "From my perspective, it's extremely serious. I do not anticipate any resolution in the immediate future."

For the time being, he has withdrawn from participation in an interreligious committee of officers of the country's main religious organizations set up several years ago for liaison between them.

What caused the breakdown was the handling of a statement by the National Council to a congressional committee, opposing proposed tax credits for parents of children in nonpublic schools.

Beyond this general Protestant position, however, the statement also included assertions — later withdrawn — that Catholics are not unable but are "unwilling to pay" costs of parochial schools, and that they give only $30 or $40 each a year to the church to do so.

"This is the sloppiest kind of work to say the least," Bishop Rauch, of Washington, D.C., said in a telephone interview. "We see it as a misrepresentation of the truth."

The figures apparently had ignored the fact that most parochial school funds come from tuitions paid to them — not from church contributions. Bishop Rausch also objected to the "acerbic tone" of the rescinded section.

The NCC's general secretary, Dr. R. H. Edwin Espy, had repudiated the section as soon as he learned it had been given to the Houe Ways and Means Committee May 15, and had it withdrawn.

"It is not a statement of the National Council," he said then, wiring an apology to the U.S. Catholic Conference and retrieving the statement to submit a revised one two days later.

This, however, did not settle the problem with the Catholic agency, which holds that the two groups had agreed to consult about such actions on disputed issues, and it had not been directly informed either of the original or revised statements, but heard of them only through news reports.

"The understanding we had was either violated or ignored," Bishop Rausch said. "The fact that they proceeded as they did without our being aware of it in any way is a serious fracture of communications."

Dr. Hunter, questioned about it, agreed, saying, "Common ecumenical courtesy demanded that we talk with them in advance and have the benefit of their feedback. It's unfortunate we didn't do it and we regret it."

Dr. Espy hoped to meet with Bishop Rausch this week to try to resolve the problem, and Bishop Rausch said he was open to discussions, but saw no ready solution, since the difficulty involved procedures rather than personalities.

"Too much remains to be explored and explained," he said.

What added a possibly wider dimension to the conflict was that it came in the midst of countrywide Roman Catholic consideration about whether that Church should join the NCC.

Anne and Charles Lindbergh

UPI TELEPHOTO

Forty-four years ago today on May 27, 1927, Charles Lindbergh — the national hero after flying the Atlantic alone May 20-21, secretly wed Anne Morrow. But with a cross-country air trip in mid-June, Lucky Lindy introduced his bride to the world. On their return they had a second honeymoon at Falaise, the estate of financier Harry Guggenheim. Nearly half a century later Charles and Anne Lindbergh returned to Falaise — this time to dedicate it as a museum bequeathed to Nassau County by Guggenheim who died in 1971.

Bill Would Boost Dairy Co-ops Power

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Antitrust Division of the Justice Department says provisions in a pending Senate farm bill would greatly increase the power and influence of politically potent dairymen's cooperatives.

In addition, says Asst. Atty. Gen. Thomas E. Kauper, enactment of the provisions would undermine antitrust suits the Justice Dpeartment has brought against two of the largest co-ops, Dairymen, Inc., and Associated Milk Producers, Inc.

The provisions, included by the Senate Agriculture Committee in a general farm bill, would increase milk price supports; limit imports of dairy products, and increase the control of dairy co-ops over milk supplies.

Kauper, in a letter to Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., recommended that the bill be sent back to the Agriculture Committee for further consideration of the dairy provisions. The Associated Press obtained a copy independently Saturday.

"We believe that, at the very least, there is a conspicuous need for an explanation by the proponents of these proposed amendments of the need for them," said Kauper, whose letter was in response to a request by McGovern for the Antitrust division's views.

Kauper said the Justice Department asked to be heard by the committee before it approved the legislation, but was not given an opportunity to testify.

The dairy provisions were recommended to the committee by representatives of the various dairy co-ops, who reportedly contributed more than $2 million to political candidates in the 1972 elections, including 13 members of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Besides the pending antitrust suits, the co-ops are the subject of a lawsuit brought by consumer groups who charge they gave $422,500 to President Nixon's re-election campaign after the administration raised milk support prices.

The House Agriculture Committee, which has received the same recommendations from the dairy co-ops, is scheduled to begin writing its bill next week.

Greece Government Admits Navy Mutiny

Athens — Greece's military-backed government admitted Saturday a second naval mutiny in a week, after the captain of the destroyer Velos left of a NATO exercise and was granted political sylum in Italy for himself and his men.

Two retired admirals and what was termed a "handful" of Navy officers were rounded up here four days ago on charges they tried to seize three warships from the naval arsenal near Athens and turn their guns against the regime.

A terse government announcement Saturday said the destroyer Velos withdrew from the NATO exercise Friday off Sardinia.

The mutinies came six years after military officers seized power and suspended democratic institutions. The navy's title was changed from "Royal Navy" to "War Navy" two years ago. It is known to uphold its traditional loyalty to the king. When the first mutiny broke out this week, government spokesmen took pains to stress the royalist affiliation of its alleged leaders

Washington 'Dogs' Put Nixon Up Tree

Washington (AP) — Some Washington hostesses think President Nixon barked up the wrong tree when he warned a bachelor to watch out for "some of those dogs" at dinner parties.

"I'd rather sit next to a dog than a bug," retorted one Washington party-giver.

Nixon found himself in the doghouse after he chatted in front of new photographers with Lt. Col. John Dramesi, of Tacoma, Wash.

Dramesi, a former prisoner of war, went to the President's Oval Office to present him a flag Dramesi made from a handkerchief and a blanket while in a North Vietnam prison.

As Nixon received the flag, he quipped: "He doesn't look like 40 years old, does he," and advised Dramesi to take all the invitations to Washington dinner parties he can get.

Then Nixon said, "Watch out for some of those dogs they have you sit by." He quickly caught himself and added: "No, there are some very nice girls in Washington "

The Washington social circuit yelped in disbelief.

When told about the dog remark, a well-known Johnson-era entertainer, who, as did others, asked not to be identified, shot back:

"At the Nixon White House, yeah, but not at my parties!"

The attractive wife of Rep. J. William Stanton, R-Ohio, commented, "In some cases there are many more male dogs than female dogs. Fortunately, the President never gets seated next to the male dogs, and probably has his choice of female partners."

"As a wife of a man who has to get seated next to dogs or dolls, I'd like to say there are far more dazzlers than dogs," Mrs. Stanton said.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt chuckled: "Leave me out of it. I'm just an old gray mare."

No. Viet Offensive Said Less Likely

By Joseph Treaster
The New York Times

Saigon — United States intelligence analysts say they believe the likelihood of a North Vietnamese offensive soon is diminishing and it appears the Communists intend to concentrate instead on political activity.

Fears an offensive was in the offing were kindled by large-scale infiltration of North Vietnamese troops and materiel earlier in the year and by extensive construction work on roads and abandoned American airfields near the western border.

In recent weeks, however, the Communists have reportedly begun resettling Vietnamese from Cambodia and the North along the frontier and some analysts now say the bulldup may have been more defensive than was at first thought.

The analysts say there have been some indication the Communists are attempting to develop a contiguous strip of population along the border and they intend to eventually surface a capital in Tay Ninh Province northwest of Saigon.

Some new hamlets have sprung up and the Communists are said to be actively organizing new revolutionary committees.

Assassinations of government hamlet and village chiefs and police officials have quadrupled since the start of the cease-fire in January, the analysts say. And government agents report the Communists have increased their activity among anti-government factions.

The Communists are also reportedly making a concerted effort to convince the people who fled to the larger towns from vietcong areas during the war to return to their old homes.

The Vietnamese have shown little respect for the cease-fire since the start and earlier this month it appeared to some that the accord was falling apart.

Jarred by the massive north Vietnamese infiltration, President Nixon withdrew U.S. minesweepers from North Vietnam and broke off talks on postwar economic aid to Hanoi.

The analysts say they also believe the North Vietnamese are under pressure from the Soviet Union and China to try and work out a political solution before they resort to full-scale war again.

Darned Dog Didn't Bark

Genoa, Italy (UPI) — A Genoa court has ruled that Pietro Audano must pay $1.280 damages to Piero Campanini because his dog bit Campanini without barking first.

Campanini said the dog was crouching under a parked car and bit his hand when he tried to chase it away. The court ruled he could not know whether the dog was dangerous since it did not bark or growl.

Disgraced British Minister Gets Legislators' Sympathy

From News Wires

London — Sympathy from fellow legislators welled up Saturday for disgraced Air Force Minister Lord Lambton after he spoke in a frank TV interview about the "casual affair" with a call girl that forced his resignation.

Lambton and another aristocrat, Earl Jellicoe, 55-year-old government leader in the House of Lords, quit last week after admitting they associated with call girls.

Scotland Yard Saturday questioned members of organized crime and London call girls, trying to locate the former Irish convent girl whose liaisons with the officials sparked Britain's biggest sex scandal in a decade.

The missing call girl, Mrs. Norma Levy, is suspected of belonging to an international prostitution ring catering to the rich and famous. Mrs. Levy, also known as Norma Russell, 26, is a fair-haired, green-eyed girl from a rural Irish village who developed a taste for the high life.

Lambton, 50, told his side of the story in a British Broadcasting Corp. interview screened late Friday in which he talked candidly about his sex life and admitted having taken drugs but brushed aside suggestions that his activities could have endangered national security.

The interview, at Lambton's country mansion in the north of England, prompted immediate expressions of sympathy from other legislators, including Laborite James Wellbeloved, who has probed persistently at the security aspects of the affair.

Wellbeloved said: "Lord Lambton came across on television very well. He showed integrity and one has a lot of compassion for him as an individual."

Some Laborites have been concerned that Jellicoe and Lambton, both of whom had access to allied defense secrets, had been open to possible blackmail through prostitutes

In his interview with Robin Day, a senior BBC journalist, Lambton said he would never have let himself be blackmailed and had no information that the Russians did not have.

Day asked him: "Why should a man of your social position, charm and personality have to go to whores?"

Lambton replied: "I think that people sometimes like variety. I think it's as simple as that."

Lambton, who also faces charges of possession marijuana and pep pills, told Day he had taken opium in Singapore and smoked hashish in Arab countries.

Lord Lambton

Lambton has said he also intends to resign from Parliament. Jellicoe sits in the House of Lords by hereditary right.

Sleep Value

Italy (AP) — An hour's sleep is worth $2.45, a court ruled. The court found a textile company guilty of keeping six citizens awake at night for a total of 900 hours each and ordered the firm to pay them about $2,200 apiece.

Somalia: Ethiopia Readying for War

Addis Ababa (UPI) — Somalia Saturday charged Ethiopian troops were massed along its frontier in preparation for "agressive war" and formally asked the Organization of African Unity (OAU) to intervene in the territorial dispute.

Ethiopia denied the charge and said it was willing to discuss what it described as only a border demarcation issue with its eastern neighbor.

Somalia lodged its appeal in a message from President Mohammed Siad Barre read to heads of state and government from the 41-member OAU. The organization celebrates its 10th birthday here this week.

Siad said he could not deliver the message personally because he chose "to stay with my people in this hour of imminent peril."

Somalian officials said three divisions of Ethiopian soldiers were poised in Ogaden Province of eastern Ethiopia along the border separating the two nations. Somalia claims the ogaden belongs to it.

Somalia bases its territorial claim — which involves an area equal to one fourth of Ethiopia's total lands — on the fact that Somalians live in the area. But Ethipian Prime Minister Alkili Hafte Wold said. "If such ethnically based claims were met, there would be absolutely chaos in Africa."

Gallup Surveys Abroad

Watergate to Affect U.S.-World Relations

Paris — The Watergate affair, which has dominated the news in America, has been given front-page coverage almost daily in the other nations of the world.

The word "Watergate" has become not only a household word in the United States, it has entered the language of other nations as well.

Reaction of these people, as reported by the directors of 24 Gallup-affiliated survey organizations, in conference in France last week, falls into two broad categories. The first is the belief that Watergate will severely reduce President Nixon's effectiveness in foreign policy matters and put a new strain on political and economic relations between the U.S. and other nations.

In the second category, respect for the climate of open inquiry in the U.S. which permits the press to probe extensively in the higher councils of government with impunity is cited

Typical of comments falling into the first category is the statement of the director of a survey institute in a major European country Commenting on the views of his countrymen, he said. "Before Nixon can be persuasive in asking Europe to make concessions to his new European plans, he will have to put his own house in order"

There appears to be little gloating or feeling of self-satisfaction among the informed citizenry of the nations reported on In fact, people in some countries, according to the reports, have come to expect scandals in government and are not particularly disturbed by the situation in the United States It appears the image of politicians leaves much to be desired in many nations of the world.

According to these reports, there is a feeling of sympathy for the American people who must add still a new problem to the many others which they have faced during the last decade.

Each Gallup director reports that President Nixon's prestige—at a high point after the Vietnam peace settlement in January—has suffered, whether or not he is seen as directly involved in Watergate. In some nations, Watergate has confirmed the feeling that President Nixon cannot be trusted

Others, feel President Nixon is the victim of circumstances and Watergate is the kind of situation that can develop when a nation has a free-wheeling political system which places few restrictions on candidates seeking office, including the amount of money which can be spent on campaigns.

Criticism among informed citizenry abroad centers not so much on the actual bugging incident—viewed as foolish and naive—but on what is believed to be attempts to cover up the situation.

Public opinion reports on Watergate were presented at the Gallup international conference by public opinion experts representing Australia, Austria, Canada, Brazil, Denmark, Finland, France, Great Britain, Greece, India, Italy, Israel, Japan, the Netherlands, Norway, the Philippines, Portugal, Puerto Rico, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Taiwan, West Germany and Uruguay.

Psychiatrist: Illness Just Imagined

Did 80 Just Think They Were Sick?

Berry, Ala. (AP) — A mysterious illness that afflicted 80 pupils and teachers at an elementary school in this northwest Alabama town has been diagnosed as a case of mass hysteria.

That was the conclusion reached by a state health officer last week after a two-week investigation of the incident. A psychiatrist who has lived among the residents most of her life agreed that the illness was imagined and not real.

Dr Inez Fowler, the psychiatrist, said those who had the illness, characterized by an itching rash, dizziness and nausea, were not actually sick—they just thought they were.

The rash first appeared May 11; before the day ended, 79 pupils and three teachers were treated at a local hospital and released.

Dr. Fowler, who has practiced medicine for 25 years, 15 of them as a psychiatrist, said the residents of the community "were of a deeply religious, fundamentalist type of background."

Dr. Richard Levine, the state health officer, told Berry residents in a broadcast Friday night that the rash set off a psychosomatic chain reaction that caused others to break out in rashes.

His conclusion was not popular among those who were sick

"It was definitely not imagination," said Marilyn McEachern, one of three teachers who had the rash.

Could you tell me if there is a school in Lincoln where bartenders can take a course in mixology? If not, could you give me the name of a nearby school?

—Jeff Gray, Crete

ACTION LINE: Apparently prohibition was nearly fatal to the art of mixology, at least in the area of any bona fide courses.

According to Bob Glenn, of Lincoln Technical College, no such course is offered in Lincoln, nor by any of the technical colleges in the state. Glenn said that only three states — California, Nevada and New York — have technical colleges offering mixology courses.

For further information, write State Education Dept., 721 Capitol Mall, Sacramento, California, 95814; State Education Dept., Carson City, Nevada, 89701, or State Education Dept., Albany, New York, 12224.

A sidelight on the subject is the apparent Elizabethan attitude of the Veterans Administration. Mixology is one of only two courses that you don't qualify for VA benefits. (Personality development is the other.)

There are some old cars in various stages of dismantlement in the vacant lot adjacent to 2221 So. 40th St. Is there any way our neighborhood can get this evesore cleared away?

—H. B. R., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: We informed Bill Cooley, administrative assistant to the mayor, about the situation, and he is looking into it.

Cooley said he will have the police investigate the situation to see if any of the city ordinances dealing with "junker" cars are being violated. The police will notify the owners of the property, if a violation does exist, and they'll be given 30 days to correct the situation.

We are looking for a qualified person or kennel to give field training to our 18-month-old Irish setter. Can ACTION LINE give us any help?

—Raymond Dawson, St. Edward

ACTION LINE: Chuck McClain of the State Game and Parks Commission said he is familiar with the Wilderness Kennels at Roca (for pointer and setter training). The man to talk with would be Henry Sader, RFD #1, Roca, 68430.

McClain noted that a long-time owner of setters in your area is Dr. Maurice Matthews, St. Paul, 68873. Dr. Matthews should be aware of any trainers closer to your home.

For further information, contact Chuck McClain, P.O. Box 30370, Lincoln, 68503.

Why wasn't the Irving School bus route from Prescott to Pioneers, down 33rd, made permanent?

—Area Residents, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The decision to move the route to 36th was apparently based on population figures.

Gerald Ray, Lincoln Transportation System manager, said the choice of the City Council and the transportation committee was based on what he called the "½-mile band."

The ½-mile band is a 3½-block area on each side of the actual bus route. According to Ray, more people are served when buses travel 36th, than the other route.

In particular, Ray noted a gap that would have been created from 48th to 33rd and Sheridan

Handless 6-Year-Old Farm Boy Teaches Amputee Dad Lessons

By Dean Terrill
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Sprague — For a handless six-year-old, Keith Schneider has an amazingly firm grip on things. So much so that he's giving Dad a few lessons.

Father Dennis, 26, lost his left hand in a March 10 feed grinder accident. His arm, now almost a perfect match to his son's two crippled limbs, was stubbed off just below the elbow.

But little Keith has been battling his handicaps since he was born. Fitted with maneuverable hooks when he was 15 months old, he now handles almost any situation.

"When I came out of the hospital anesthetic, the first thing I thought of was Keith," recalled the young farmer. "And right then I began seeing a lot more clearly what he has had to live with."

But amputee Schneider, now about to be fitted with a prosthesis of his own, also has been much heartened by his son's accomplishments. The game youngster handles pen, scissors or fork with ease — not to mention the family tractor.

A capable District 61 first-grader, Keith has in fact encountered but one task which is completely beyond him: tying shoelaces.

"We always buy pull-on boots or shoes that don't need tying so Keith can dress himself completely," said the father. "He was feeding himself even before he got the hooks. He was so independent he would hold cookies and such between his arms."

Readily Controlled

Held by a suspender harness, the boy's pincer-like hooks are readily controlled through shoulder muscle action. Although the devices lack the aesthetics of some other hand substitutes, they are strong in practicality.

Rubella or some other virus infection is thought to have caused Keith's congenital condition, which also included abnormalities of both feet. Even doctors at Lincoln's Orthopedic Hospital, now closed, marveled at the child's adaptation.

The father, a Sprague native who wears a beard "just for fun," nearly lost his life along with the hand. Crete Rescue Unit volunteers rushed him to Lincoln General Hospital, his arm still twisted in a 100-pound auger they removed from the grinder.

"The more I think of it, the more I think I was lucky rather than unlucky," he reflected. "If a couple of bolts hadn't broken on the grinder, my neck would have been broken or I would have bled to death. Also, my cousin was working with me and was there to call for help."

The accident occurred on a farm he and wife Charlotte were renting northwest of Crete, although they had moved just a few days before. They now live three miles south of Sprague on a pleasant 160 acres they are buying.

Handless all his young life, Keith Schneider handles a pen easily.

The couple has had considerable help from the Sprague and Martell Methodist churches. Besides raising more than $400 to aid with expenses, the congregations enlisted fence-fixing and corral-building volunteers.

A breeder of purebred Angus, Schneider has experienced his share of misfortune even beyond the physical problems. Two fires recently destroyed a barn, seven bulls and $1,500 worth of hay. Some rustled cattle and crop losses added to his woes.

But he was plucky enough that, only six days after his discharge from the hospital, he was showing cattle at the Southeast Nebraska Angus Show in Lincoln. He came home with a grand champion trophy under his one intact arm.

Since both of his other offspring are younger — Barbara is five and Danny one — Schneider has turned increasingly to Keith since the accident. It's no trick at all for the boy to hold a nut with his pincers while Dad tightens a bolt.

"I call Keith my left-hand man," said the father, his pride obvious. "Together, I guess there's just about nothing we couldn't do — even to tying shoestrings."

Flood Warnings Out Along Platte River

Denver (AP) — The National Weather Service (NWS) office in Denver said Saturday that flood warnings were continuing on the South Platte River from about Sterling, Colo., downstream to southwestern Nebraska.

At Julesburg, where flood stage is 8 feet, the river was at 7.3 feet Saturday morning. It is expected to crest there at 8.5 feet Monday.

The crest is expected to reach Paxton, Neb., at 8.5 feet Tuesday.

NWS said the mainstream of the North Platte River in Wyoming into western Nebraska was out of its banks in a number of places and still rising.

The stage Saturday morning at the Wyoming-Nebraska line was 6.4 feet, with a flood stage of 4.5 feet and a crest forecast at 6.5 feet Sunday.

The river is expected to crest at 8.6 feet at Mitchell Sunday. Flood stage at Mitchell is 6 feet.

Exon to Decide on Aid Bills This Week

United Press International

Gov. J. J. Exon signed into law Saturday some 43 bills he received from the Legislature in the past two days.

But missing from the lineup were LB256, the capital construction bill, LB172, a $20 million local school aid bill, and LB472, the ultimate $150 million a year local school aid plan.

"I will make a final decision on those bills next week," Exon told United Press International, declining further comment on them.

Among those which are now law is Bellwood Sen. Loran Schmit's LB26, one of a series of bills the lawmaker has authored this year in an effort to help combat the drug problem.

The latest legislation replaces previous penalties for pushing drugs which had a 20-year prison sentence as a maximum.

Under the new law, a first offense of drug pushing could result in a prison term of 1-10 years; a second conviction could result in a term of 5-20 years, and a third conviction could result in a mandatory 50-year sentence.

Another bill signed into law which earlier appeared to be headed for trouble on the part of the administration was LB87. It allows the use of state highway construction dollars in the replacement of ailing county bridges.

The legislation established a special fund from which counties may get up to 50% of the cost of replacing bridges.

The fund would be fed from a monthly allocation of $32,000 in state highway funds and another $32,000 from the county share of highway funds before the rest is distributed.

Nebraska now has a strict reporting requirement for campaign finances which was contained in LB267.

The legislation requires candidates to report all incoming revenue to the extent that any contribution of over $100 must be reported in detail as to source and in turn how money is spent.

Failure to report could result in the loss of the office, either at the state or local level, involved.

Also signed was LB533, which created seven technical community college districts instead of the eight originally suggested in 1971 legislation.

As to the question-marked bills, the stumbling block for the capital construction measure is a series of 11 floor amendments with a total worth of $15.4 million over the next three years.

On the local school aid issue, Exon earlier indicated he might go for a $20 million plan which would use federal revenue sharing money as does LB172. But he hasn't said anything on the distribution idea contained in the bill

As he received the measure, half the money would be distributed to local schools on a flat per pupil basis while the rest would be distributed under the equalization formula of the existing aid program.

State GOP Contribution to CRP

Check for $10,000 Not Cashed, Missing

By Dick Herman

A $10,000 check representing a Nebraska Republican party contribution 11 months ago to the Committee to Reelect the President (CRP) was never cashed and still is missing, top state GOP officials acknowledged Saturday.

Six months after the check was sent to CRP, a stop-payment order was made in Omaha.

Four months later, the $10,000 was transferred to the Douglas County Republican Central Committee's checking account.

And on June 2, the Nebraska Republican Executive Committee has on its meeting agenda the question of what happens next.

The money itself was generated June 10, 1972, at a $100-per-plate Omaha dinner. Vice President Spiro Agnew was principal speaker. At the time, party officials called the Peony Park Ballroom affair a great success.

One of the conditions governing Agnew's appearance was that $10,000 off the top of gross receipts be sent to CRP.

Two days after the dinner, it is understood, the check was mailed from Nebraska.

Disposition Still Mystery

Disposition of the original $10,000 check remains a major mystery, apparently, one which is troubling a number of Republicans.

"It could have been lost, and probably was," Richard L. Herman, Nebraska GOP national committeeman speculated.

He noted mid-June was a period of much activity for CRP officials last year, preparing for the Republican National Convention in Miami Beach and President Nixon's renomination.

Nebraskan Herman had the responsibility of chief convention arranger, in charge of all logistics. His role was entirely party-oriented, independent of CRP.

Herman reported that Jack Shonsey, Douglas County GOP finance chairman, was the man who initiated the stop-payment order.

Check Never Cashed

A reconciliation of bank statements constantly showed the $10,000 check had never been cashed. Herman observed it is nothing but good business practice to stop payments on outstanding checks if they have not been negotiated fairly promptly.

"That's long enough for a check to be out," Herman said, stressing that he, personally, "never handled any of the funds."

But Shonsey's stop-payment order was not known for some months, it develops, by the GOP headquarters in Lincoln.

Glenn Wilson, Republican executive secretary, reported he became aware of the situation when a team from the General Accounting Office (GAO) appeared to survey the party's financial records.

"GAO obviously had audited CRP and was looking for a canceled check," Wilson said Saturday. The particular check was not found.

CRP executives had told GAO they never received the $10,000 from Nebraska, despite state records reflecting the gift.

Shonsey's stop-payment directive left the $10,000 sitting in the separate bank account created especially to hand the Agnew dinner funds, Wilson said.

Money Transferred

Then, in April, Wilson continued, the money was transferred from the dinner account to the Douglas County GOP Central Committee's bank account.

That's where it is today, both Herman and Wilson agreed.

The June 1972 Agnew dinner was arranged under joint auspices of the state party and Douglas County Republicans, although technically the responsibility was the state party's, Wilson said.

One of the basic agreements was a 55-45 split between the state and Douglas County of net funds after all other expenditure obligations — such as the $10,000 assessment by CRP for Agnew's services — had been met.

If that agreement holds up, Wilson said, $5,500 of the $10,000 now in the Douglas County party's account will ultimately be transferred to the state party's bank account.

Memorial Day Rites - To Honor War Dead

More than 45,000 Americans who died in Indochina will be honored Monday, along with America's other war casualties.

But this year, Memorial Day pomp and ceremony will not be tempered by the knowledge that U.S. military personnel fight and die in Vietnam while at home most citizens enjoy a work-free holiday.

For the first time since 1959, no combat activity involving American GIs or advisers goes on in Vietnam on Memorial Day. However, warfare involving Americans reportedly continues in Cambodia and other areas of Southeast Asia.

Lincoln's Memorial Day observances begin at 7 tonight, with the Daughters of Union Veterans conducting a Civil War nurses ceremony at Wyuka Cemetery.

Activities will continue at 6 a.m. Monday, when the Veterans of Foreign Wars (VFW) sponsors a sunrise service at the two Iwo Jima monument at Lincoln Memorial Park.

At 7 a.m., wreath-laying ceremonies are scheduled at all area cemeteries, with a firing squad saluting the war dead.

The annual Memorial Day parade is to begin at 9:15 a.m. at 32nd and O Sts. About 40 units are scheduled to move east on O St. to the Wyuka entrance and then continue to the Grand Army of the Republic (GAR) Circle.

Officer of the day is Col. Henry G. Jacoby (Ret.), with Maj. Gen. Francis L. Winner, new state adjutant general, as honorary parade marshal and Col. Edward C. Binder as parade marshal.

Services are to begin at 9:45, with Maj. Stanley J. Redmerski, chaplain, giving the invocation. VFW Post 131 and an auxiliary junior band will play the Star Spangled Banner.

The traditional reading of the Gen. John A. Logan proclamation will be done by Col. Jacoby. Gen. Logan initiated modern-day memorial observances.

A bugler will sound assembly at 10:20, and American Legion Post 3 will give a firing squad salute.

After Taps and Echo Taps, the Nebraska Air National Guard will conduct a flyover aerial salute. The benediction will be given by the Rev. John W. Elkwall.

Another Memorial Day tradition will be continued at Lincoln's Roman Catholic cemetery. The Most Rev. Glennon P. Flavin, bishop of the Catholic Diocese of Lincoln, will celebrate a Mass at 10 a.m. on the Calvary Cemetery grounds.

Tornadoes Strike Edge of Columbus, Area East of York

By Associated Press

A tornado touched down on the northeast edge of Columbus late Saturday afternoon, causing some damage but no injuries before it receded into the clouds.

Trees and signs were reported damaged and four cars on a lot were damaged when one of them was hurled into the others.

The wind also uprooted the flooring of a home that was under construction.

The National Weather Service (NWS) reported a small twister touched down east of York at about 4:15 p.m. Saturday. No damage was reported.

The NWS office in Lincoln said heavy rains in the Osceola area sent Davis Creek out of its banks and over a road.

The creek flows into the north branch of the Big Blue River.

It was reported that 3.67 inches of rain fell in two hours at Osceola.

About 100 to 150 persons were stranded for a time Saturday night at the Platte Center auditorium becuase of flooding. They were evacuated safely, the Nebraska State Patrol reported.

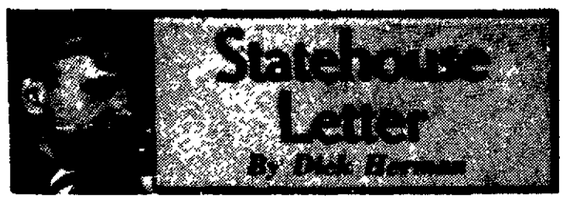
Witnesses said the town's business district was under two to three feet of water.

The people in the auditorium were attending a wedding reception.

Evacuation of families in low-lying areas in and around Platte Center was reported under way late Saturday

A funnel cloud was reported about 9 p.m., five miles southeast of Yutan. A patrol trooper was dispatched to the area but was driven back by water six inches deep on Neb. 92 between Wahoo and Yutan.

The patrol reported several state highways and county roads throughout southeast Nebraska covered by water



The calendar says Monday is the official Memorial Day in these United States. Yet a special moment of memorial, of recognition of the deeds of those passed, slipped by virtually unnoted in the Nebraska Legislature last week. An elderly gentleman peered around the bend of one of those marble columns, was introduced to senators, waved hello and vanished.

The really senior citizen was Riley Harris of Fremont. Fifty-four years ago, he was a member of the Nebraska State Senate, from Fairbury. Today he is the only living survivor of the 1919 Legislature. It was that particular Legislature which set into direct motion construction of the Statehouse, one of this state's man-made glories and a structure of continuing citizen pride.

Had not Riley Harris and his associates acted when they did, certainly Nebraska would have ultimately built a "new" State Capitol. But because life is so governed by the chance intermixing of personalities and changing times, it wouldn't have been the Tower on the Plains. Nebraska might have gotten a Capitol which like those in too many other states, seeks to follow architectural lines of the federal Capitol. Had that happened, we would today be less fortunately endowed.

The Memorial Day lesson would seem to be that leadership always has its consequences for those who follow. And those in transient leadership positions, later totally ignored by the body politic, may properly and warmly reflect to themselves that "but for me . . ." Some of that reflection might also be more bitterly phrased. "If only I had . . ."

All remember the furor two years ago when the Legislature whooped the tax on cigarets 5¢ a package to build a great new University of Nebraska fieldhouse and authorize State Fairgrounds improvements Bull-roaring over the crime against smokers doesn't even re-echo any more. And in a few more years, Nebraskans will thump their chests about having the best fieldhouse in the Big Eight, not to say the entire Great Plains

Governor on Spot

Assuming he will seek reelection next year, Gov. Exon is in something of a no-win position as regards a running mate

The Legislature's action Friday fixing the salary of the next lieutenant governor at $25,000 — equal to that of the governor — just might encourage a greater turnout of candidates. Exon, some of his political associates think, would be in a spot if he should pre-select one of the crowd as his designated running mate.

All candidates not blessed by the chief executive would then be irritated at being left from the annointed fold.

Democratic voters in the primary could also rebuff the governor's personal choice, handing the head of the ticket a blackish eye

Exon might calculate the odds and say that any one of three or four people would be acceptable to him — recognizing that in November, 1974, Nebraskans will cast but one ballot to elect both the governor and lieutenant governor A herd of Democratic candidates for lieutenant governor would give a good shot to someone with a cadre of voter popularity — even a Terry Carpenter. Republicans are drooling at the prospect of a fratricial Exon-Carpenter ticket.

Beer Business On Tap for Hermans?

A family involved in one of Nebraska's most noted truck lines may soon also become involved in the beer business.

Richard L. Herman of Omaha Saturday confirmed that he and his brother Dale have completed negotiations with the widow of Leander M. Kalin to acquire the late Mr. Kalin's Budweiser beer wholesale distributorship.

The men are top officers of Herman Truck Co. Richard also is Republican National Committeeman for Nebraska.

The change in distributorship, Richard L. Herman said, is not certain since it is "subject to approval of the Annheuser-Busch Co. of St. Louis."

Mr. Kalin died March 6 of this year at the age of 75. He had held the Budweiser distributorship for Lancaster and several surrounding counties for a number of years.

"My brother and I are getting into other activities," Richard L. Herman responded in answer to a question of diversification of family business plans.

Dale Herman already has secured an option to purchase a home in Lincoln, planning to move from Omaha if and when the transaction is completed

N.U Biz Ad Dean Miller to Retire

Dr. Charles S. Miller, only the fourth dean the College of Business Administration at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has had in its 54-year history, will retire June 30.

During his 15 years as Dean, Miller has led the college through its greatest period of growth in students and faculty and through a major reorganization and broadening of its services to the Nebraska business community.

Dr. Charles S. Miller

The retiring dean became the administrative head of the College of Business Administration in 1958. He joined the Nebraska faculty as a professor of management in 1949, following some 10 years of business experience as treasurer of the Glenn L. Martin Co.'s Omaha aircraft plant during World War II, and later as controller of the C. A. Swanson and Sons food firm in Omaha.

Dean Miller was a member of the business school faculty at Creighton University during the thirties. He earned his bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Iowa, and also attended Creighton and the University of Colorado.

In addition to his career as professor and dean, Miller served a short stint as acting athletic director of N.U.

In his years as dean, the college developed a Master of Business Administration degree, beginning in 1964.

Miller has been active at the national level of higher education for business. He has served in several capacities with the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business which is responsible for the accreditation of business education programs — both undergraduate and masters.

With retirement at hand, Miller plans to continue his business associations through the boards of directors on which he now serves.

He will increase his work with the Small Business Administration, a volunteer responsibility he has accepted as willingly as he has similar chores over the years with the Lincoln United Fund, City Charter Committee, Lincoln Hospital Committee, St. Elizabeth Hospital and others.

Office Appointments

Some County Chiefs Hit Plan

By Dean Ehling

As expected, some opposition is being expressed by Lancaster County elected officials over a recommendation in the city-county consolidation report that a number of officials be appointed instead of elected.

The report of Arthur D. Little Inc., a San Francisco consulting firm, suggests that a change in the state constitution be considered, "to reduce the number of department heads who are elcted and have them elected on a nonpartisan basis . . ."

"Evidence is lacking to support the argument that election of department heads insures greater responsiveness to the public," the report states

Treasurer Frank Golden is one who opposes the change.

"I wouldn't be for it, of course I think it takes the voice of the people completely out of this thing I certainly don't feel that the appointment of these people would be the answer," Golden said.

'Do as You're Told'

Assessor Fritz Meyer joined Golden in opposition to the change

"An assessor should be independent and responsible to the taxpayers The board should continue to act as a board of equalization

"If the county assessor was appointed and under the jurisdiction of a commission, he is more or less restricted in his actions as far as establishing values. You do as you are told or you won't be appointed the next time," Meyer said.

"I feel as long as we have county government and they are elected by the people, any elected official shall perform to the best of his abilities If he hasn't performed his duties, the electorate has an opportunity to see he isn't reelected," Meyer said

'Biggest Complaint'

Clerk Carl Hartman doesn't oppose the recommendations but is unhappy with the consultants.

"I don't think I would oppose it but we need to do some fast thinking about this. My biggest complaint with Arthur D Little is they never contacted me personally."

Hartman said researchers were in his office but never interviewed him as he had expected them to.

County Atty. Paul Douglas expressed little opposition to the report's recommendation

"There is some value in having a few offices directly responsible to a commission. Whether any others ought to be elected, I'm not prepared to say they should or should not be," Douglas said.

Up to Voters

Register of Deeds Kenneth Ferguson left the decision to the voters

"If the people of Lancaster County would decide by election they would want to go to another form of government, it would be fine with me," he said

Candidates To Get Copy of New Law

Every candidate for state office in next year's elections is going to get, with his filing receipt, a copy of a comprehensive political campaign finances reporting bill passed by the Legislature Friday.

So says Secretary of State Allen J. Beermann.

LB267, one of Waverly Sen. Jerome Warner's 1973 legislative successes, replaces the 74-year-old Nebraska Corrupt Practices Act

That ancient code was supposed to forbid certain political campaign acts. But never in the history of any living Nebraskan was a single prosecution ever brought under it for alleged violations.

The last time the now-repealed Corrupt Practices Act was employed was at a State Fair several years ago. Officials wouldn't let political parties give free ice water at party booths to visitors.

Beermann said his office will very likely adopt a new political financial reporting form much like that now used by the federal government.

LB267, which applies to candidates for office in Omaha and Lincoln municipal elections as well as for state and public power district slots, carries with it a removal-from-office penalty for willful violations

Some of the improvements hailed by Beermann include year-around reporting by ongoing political organizations, complete disclosure of campaign donors, stopping of the practice of loan write-offs and rapid billing by campaign vendors.

To date, three men already have filed for future elections.

John W. Swanson, Public Service Commissioner from Eustis, is on record going for reelection to another six-year term in 1974. And George A. Boucher of Ravenna has filed for the legislative seat now occupied by Sen. Gerald Stromer of Kearney.

Lincoln's Del Lienemann last September filed for election in the spring of 1976 as a delegate to the Republican National Convention that year.

Cook: Questioning Was The Nail in (His) Coffin

Washington — May 16 was a bad day for Lincoln native G. Bradford Cook.

The was the day Cook resigned from the chairmanship of the Securities & Exchange Commission. The youngest man ever to hold the post, he was just beginning to get the feel of it when events conspired against him.

In an interview with the Washington Star-News Service, Cook told about that day. He was worried he said, about becoming the subject of impeachment proceeding and he thought: "Who needs that?"

Impeachment is virtually the only way a member of an independent regulartory agency can be removed and Cook said it had been mentioned.

On May 16, Cook recalled, he returned to his office from a commission meeting to receive a note summoning him to a meeting with Gen. Alexander Haig, White House interim chief of staff.

'This Vesco Thing'

Haig said he had had some calls on "this Vesco thing" and asked Cook what his judgment was on it.

Cook said he discussed with Haig the fact that he had been questioned for five hours the previous day by a Senate subcommittee chaired by Sen. William B. Proxmire, D-Wis. That session, he said, "was the nail in the coffin."

He was to appear that same afternoon before a closed session of a House Commerce subcommittee chaired by Rep. Harley O. Staggers, D-W. Va.

"Staggers was loaded for bear," Cook said. He told Haig he had received "a couple of calls" saying Staggers was calling for impeachment. In light of that, he said, he told Haig, it might be best for him to resign and Haig agreed.

A subcommittee source said he never heard any mention of impeachment of Cook.

Cook said Haig never asked for his resignation and described the general as "very warm, very civil, very pleasant," throughout their meeting.

$200,000 Contribution

The resignation came just days after his public learned that he ordered references to a secret $200,000 political contribution deleted from an SEC complaint against financier Robert L. Vesco.

The deletion was made over the objection of some SEC staff members who were unaware that the money represented a contribution to, the President's reelection committe. They were suspicious, however, of a reported $250,000 missing from Vesco's accounts.

Discussion of the deletion took place last November when Cook was director of the SEC's division of market regulations.

A federal grand jury which issued criminal charges against former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell, former Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans and Vesco as a result of dealings over the $200,000 campaign gift, said Cook and Stans (then chairman of Nixon's reelection committee) discussed the contribution and the SEC's civil suit before it was filed.

Stan's urged Cook to delete any mention of the donation in the suit, which was filed Nov. 27, three weeks after the election.

Omaha (AP) — The bodies of three men who died in a three-alarm apartment house fire here Friday night were identified Saturday.

Acting Douglas County Coroner James Keenan said they were Clarence Ashburn, 71; William Bailey, 41, and Dave Gilkison, whose age was not learned.

Keenan said Ashburn, whose body was found in a hallway, died from smoke inhalation. The other two men were in the room where the fire apparently started.

Sharp Alleges Government Repression

Repressive government activity "in the last two or three years" aimed at social activists, certain major national communications outlets and some religious bodies may have contributed to a relatively sterile community climate in the United States.

Community pressure not to rock any social boats or the status quo has caused deadening reactions in many religious denominations, Dr. Frank Sharp, director of the American Baptist Church (ABC) Press Service, said.

Dr. Sharp spoke at a meeting of the ABC's Roger Williams Fellowship, convened in connection with the ABC's biennial convention in Lincoln this week.

"I've never seen a time when people are so uptight," the longtime Baptist religious staff member asserted, "when reaction against social activity has been so strong."

As great as have been the pressures of government against certain groups to conform, Dr. Sharp speculated that the biggest factor working against a "climate of openness" may be pressure of a disapproving local community.

"Churches are the deadest place right now." The movement of the 1960s toward social goals has been replaced, he observed, by a fervor of religiusity and internal denomination "furniture rearranging . . . . The zeal for social action is low."

Dr. Sharp included in his sweep Christian denominations generally, not just his own.

Reviewed for the fellowship audience have been surveillance actions of government agencies—especially the Internal Revenue Service—directed against church organizations. The stated objective of such reviews is reexamination of tax exemption status.

What this has done is create "an atmosphere of fear and harassment," Dr. Sharp declared.

Federal moves beamed at public and private communications media also pose threats to traditional liberties "As Christians and as churchmen, this is our concern," the ABC official counseled.

Washington (AP) — Republican Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, in his first constituent newsletter since taking office, revealed that he would hold disaster hearings in New York and Pennsylvania. The disaster he referred to was tropical storm Agnes. In the newsletter he mistakenly called it "Hurricane Agnew."

Bike Trip To Aid Arthritis Foundation

Blair (AP) — Two students at Dana College in Blair will begin a 500-mile bicycle trip from the campus to their homes in Wisconsin Sunday.

Stuart Hansen of Marshfield and Jeff Hogden of Galesville said bicycling seemed the surest and least expensive way of getting home due to the threat of a gasoline shortage.

In cooperation with the Arthritis Foundation, Hansen and Hogden said, they have solicited sponsors who have agreed to pay them for each mile traveled.

They said they had received pledges in the amount of $500 provided they complete the trip.

They hope to arrive at Marshfield Friday, picking up additional funds and pledges for the Arthritis Foundation along the way.

Bob Wanek's A Paradox: He's Really No Salesman

By Gwen Nobbe

Crete — There is something paradoxical about Bob Wanek.

He has one of the most successful home furnishing businesses in the state. But he doesn't really like the selling game himself.

He wanted, at one time, only to have a small electronics repair business.

Yet he yielded to the pressures of the time and was spun to the top of his field in less than 20 years.

Until 1951 Wanek was content farming by night and working at the Crete Mills during the day Then he was drafted.

"While I was in the service I had a chance to go to electronics school. That seemed to be impetus I needed. I decided electronics would be the name of the game."

Out of the service, Wanek returned to the Crete area (where he was born) and the Crete Mills, but not for long.

In 1954 he went to Milford Trade School, finished his courses in 1955, and immediately set up shop in a small building in the heart of Crete.

Bob Wanek

In the first stage of his business Wanek says he was interested in only one thing, providing the best service possible for customers.

Customer Impetus

"I made a good living, and would have been happy, I think, providing just service, but soon customers were asking me to sell televisions," Wanek said.

"When I added the first line of TVs I outgrew my first store, which happened to be about the same size as my present office" (less than 2,000 square feet), Wanek said.

"I rented a larger building in Crete, but that was only the beginning. Soon after the televisions, I started getting requests for other appliances, so I had to find a line of appliances, — and another larger building.

So now he had three stores and a substantial increase in overhead.

The high overhead disturbed Wanek, because one of his business credos is to sell merchandise to the people at the "best price possible."

The stick — furnishings wise — that broke the retailer's back was when customers began asking for a selection of furniture. This would require more space, so Wanek decided to consolidate his holdings and built his first store, on his present location

"I don't think I would have considered adding the furniture line, even though we had many requests. But when I built my first home, we looked at all the furniture that was available in the larger market centers — and we were fascinated," Wanek said.

At the time he began to feel that in his area should have a chance for "personal selection," instead of buying through a catalog or being confined to just a few display items.

That Markup

When Wanek moved to his highway location on the east edge of Crete he added another credo. He's not an evangelist about his pricing, but he feels he's doing right by his customers.

"I think we must be doing something right " We seem to do a lot of business," he said.

"One thing that really bothered me in the beginning was the tremendous markup most stores seemed to have on furniture," Wanek said. "I think everyone should be allowed to make a fair profit, but some places were marking items up 100 or 200% — that wasn't fair to the customer," he said.

"I realize now, however, that often those markups were not all company profits. I'm sure the overhead for many of those stores must have been just killing them."

The first country store that cut Wanek's overhead had some 14,000 square feet of space. Twelve additions later it is 15 times as large — not including a couple of warehouses.

Although Wanek says he enjoys selling "sometimes," he labels himself "not a good salesperson."

"There are some who can sell anything, but I don't think the people who've bought from me in the past have done so because I've really sold them. They bought because they trusted me.

His real love?

'My Machine'

"I get a thrill out of seeing the business grow, and grow with efficiency. I like being a part of my machine, and I think it's a reflection on me when the machine runs smoothly, giving the customers the very best for their money," he said.

Wanek believes his business is going to continue to grow, and he will continue to try to find "a better way for the people "

Bob Wanek's passion is not all centered on the efficiency rating of his store. Another object of his affection is his home, truly a dream home, located on Highway 33 west of Crete.

The home — dubbed by many a "million-dollar mansion" — is plush, but Wanek stresses it cost nowhere near a million.

"We practically built it ourselves," he said. He hired a team of local carpenters who worked only from the Waneks' own floor plan. "They had no blueprints or architect's model, and they did a fantastic job," he said, beaming

The home is located on a man-made lake and attracts the attention of most motorists

78 Buildings In Warehousing Master Plan

One of the first steps in a $170,000 business venture has been completed in Lincoln.

Headed by Lincoln native L. W. Bartzat, it involves a new type of individualized storage and warehousing

Bartzat plans to construct 78 steel buildings, varying up to 4,000 cubic feet of storage, on a four-acre site at 401 S. Coddington Ave.

The first building is ready for occupancy. Bartzat hopes to have the remainder completed by late fall.

The buildings will be leased to individuals and businesses. Rents will vary, according to the size of the building, from $15 to $40 monthly.

The buildings will be water and rodent proof and will meet the city fire code Bartzat said there will be no windows in the buildings and that the area will eventually be fenced.

Sheraton Inn-Airport to Open

A motor lodge that Manager Joe Arkin says is "a $2-million hotel to be run by the youngest staff in the world" (average age 26) opens for business Wednesday northwest of Lincoln in the Union Pacific tract.

Sheraton Inn-Airport, a 5-story, 80,000 sq. ft. brick and concrete structure, has 128 rooms, a banquet room that will seat 250 and meeting rooms to accommodate 300. Located at 3200 NW 12th, north of the I-80 overpass, it was built by Lincoln Skyrise Inc. and backed financially by five Lincoln stockholders.

Dick Lowe, Lincoln real estate developer, was consultant on the project for Development Services Inc., of which he is president. Kingery Construction Co. was the general contractor

Located on a six-acre site, the Sheraton franchise operation will have a "people operation" philosophy, Arkin explained. "Our 55 employes will be out to sell themselves, their personalities, not just our food and lodging space. They've all been trained to do everything, except work the front desk." Peter Bertrand is assistant manager and Dick Beard, manager trainee

The restaurant, lounge and banquet facilities are located in an octagon shaped building. The outdoor pool will be enclosed in a courtyard by winter. An 18-hole putting green will adjoin it.

Construction will begin this fall on a Japanese restaurant atop the hotel area, with access by spiral staircase. A staff

Corporate Profits Higher But Slowdown to Pace Is Expected

Profits of U S. corporations for the first quarter of 1973 were 26% higher than a year earlier, but it is doubtful that this rate of gain can be maintained, First National City Bank of New York City says

Though profits will continue to increase, the high growth in earnings will be increasingly difficult to repeat as more firms are approaching practical limits of capacity, Citibank says. They find that gains from cost cutting and improved productivity are dwindling, the bank predicted

Its survey of 1,545 corporations with after-tax profits of more than $11 billion reveals that five out of six reporting firms had higher profits for the year

Week in Review

New York — The stock market finally leaped out of the doldrums last week and racked up its best gains in months. There were some good fundamental reasons for the buying but most of it seemed to be based on the premise that prices simply had gone down far enough.

The bulk of the week's gain came Thursday, when the Dow Jones industrial average rocketed upward by 29.42 points and closed at 922.44. This was the Dow's best advance in 21 months and the fourth largest in history.

The price of gold, even above $100 an ounce, is an irrelevant curiosity, interesting but unimportant

Heifers, Steers Up

Omaha (UPI) — The weekly summary of the Livestock Foundation of Omaha said fat cattle receipts in the Omaha last week were "marked by a preponderance of better quality cattle." The foundation said improved weather conditions in the area brought an improvement in the general appearance and condition of the cattle.

Fed steers and heifers finished 25-50 higher with steers having a bit of the best of the going and many sales of the better kinds of both steers and heifers at the full advance.

Barrows and gilts finished steady to 50 higher. Butcher top last week 38.75, paid early, with the bulk going at 34.25-38.50.

Feeder Cattle

Omaha (UPI) — The National Livestock Feeders Assn. said the nation's feeder cattle and calf market was a divided affair last week.

It said trading at most central and western points was on a fully steady to strong basis, while the trend east of the Mississippi was one of generally lower prices.

Basketball Diplomacy for JFK Women's Team

By Helen Haggie

Wahoo — Students at John F. Kennedy College are busting their buttons with pride. Citizens of Wahoo are doing the same thing.

Why?

The JFK girls basketball team has been chosen by the U.S., State Department to represent American women's teams in The People's Republic of China. The men's group representing this country will be made up of an all-star team.

One reason the JFK team was chosen, Coach George Nicodemus speculated, is that his teams have twice been named AAU women's champs. That is, twice in two years.

Diana Reviello of Receville, Iowa; Gail Ahrenholtz ot Manilla, Iowa; Mary Nelson of Dunlop, Iowa, team members, and Kathy Lew of Malvern, Iowa, team manager, were interviewed concerning the trip.

Three All-American members of the team, Linda White of Vicoria, Tex.; Juliene Barzski of Roselle Park, N.J., and Barbara Wishchmeier of Mediapolis, Iowa, were in Lima, Peru, playing with the U.S. women's all-star team at the First World Festival.

Other team members are Jaci Junkman of Manson, Iowa; Barbara Hill of Urbandale, Iowa; Dea Martin of West Field, Iowa; Joyce Stephens of Malvern, Iowa; Nita Stephens of Stephensville, Tex., and Debbie Croft of Belle Plaine, Iowa.

Though transportation to and from the Republic of China is paid for by the State Department, and the girls are guests of China during their three-week stay, such matters as paying for new playing uniforms and equipment have cause anxiety on the small college campus.

Since there are to be basketball clincis, as well as eight games to be played, basketballs were purchased, according to Nicodemus. "We have some red, white and blue balls to take. And we have new uniforms with 'U.S.A.' on them. That is, they've been ordered. We may have to pick them up in California when we get there June 11."

The girls are not only good athletes, they are good students and fine young women, he added. "And only one (Diana Reviello) is a senior."

Kathy, team manager, was a squad member until she injured a leg.

Team members interviewed agreed that there were two reasons they entered JFK — a strong athletic program and the small-college atmosphere.

Both Diana and Gail also are out for track.

Diana didn't become interested in basketball until she was 15, she said. Gail and Mary have played since they

The Folks Out in Havelock Are All Smiles After Most Successful Cleanup Drive Ever

There are many smiles in Havelock. And there should be.

The largest cleanup campaign there has been completed. It was an activity of the Havelock Business Assn.

In fact, this year there were two parts to the project. One was a poster contest for children in kindergarten through sixth grade at schools north of Vine and east of 48th. Waverly was included, according to Roger Thomas, president of the association.

Vicki Rokeby, chairman of the retail promotion committee, was in charge of the contest. Prizes of $25, $15 and $10 were given to the children for the best posters in three divisions: kindergarten through second grade, third and fourth grades and fifth and sixth grades.

Mr. Thomas pointed out that about a hundred entries were expected. There was amazement when 750 posters arrived. Each entry is returned to the child, bearing a ribbon labeled "Participant."

"The purchase of that number of ribbons was a drain on our budget," the president chuckled. "But we always go over the budget and we were amazed at the response."

In addition to the posters, school children brought trash (some three city dumptruck loads) to a fenced-off area behind the Safeway store.

The city provided the trucks, and Ken Bolkowatz helped out with his front-end loader.

Maurice Carlton, chairman of the cleanup campaign, said that during the first Saturday of the campaign, after picking up 50 truckloads of such things as old water heater, stoves and sofas and taking them to the city dump, the volunteers didn't go south of Logan. The trash was hauled off to the city dump.

Area residents left their discarded things near alleys. One disappointed woman called and said her stove hadn't been picked up.

Mr. Carlton assured her that there would be a second pickup the following Saturday, when some 30 more loads were gathered and sent to the dump.

Twelve to 15 volunteers from the association helped load the trucks each Saturday, Mr. Carlton said.

Though there have been area cleanups in Havelock for about 10 years, he added, this one was the largest.

All in all, it was a big success, and association members are pleased with the results. They still are receiving letters and telephone calls from thankful residents.

Ken Bolkowatz, using his own equipment, loads trash.

She's A Doer — Not a Joiner

By Linda Ulrich

There's been more variety in Brandee Dworsky's life than in a better-than-average variety show.

A native of Los Angeles, she began a career as a professional singer on the stage when she was 4. She had her own television show when she was 16 and sang her way across the United States and much of the Orient and Europe.

Joel Gray taught her how to dance and she's done shows with stars like Barbara McNare and Carol Burnett.

But singing, she said, was a sideline "for the fun it brought me, the places it took me."

Education

Brandee attended the University of California at Berkeley and graduated from the University of California at Los Angeles with a B.A. in English and creative writing and a teaching credential.

She was associate editor of Photoplay, a fan magazine. There her duties included interviewing new stars and writing a teen-age advice column.

While in Los Angeles, Brandee also taught elementary school.

Although her writing is now "a private outlet" and most of her singing consists of singing to herself ("I sing when I drive down O street"), she finds life to be "very, very exciting."

Her career now is being a woman, a mother and a wife," but, she says, "I'm totally fulfilled.

Feminist

"I've always been a feminist and a rebel but I've never had any problem being a woman. I find it very exciting to be a woman, to have men open doors for me. . ."

And she finds that "there's not enough time to do all the things I want to do."

Brandee is active in the Lincoln Community Playhouse and the Playhouse Guild. She has appeared in four playhouse musicals and two Kosmet Klub shows.

She is a member of the Nebraska Art Assn. Brandee also enjoys golfing at Hillcrest Country Club where she is in the Hillcrest Stagette show, a variety show for women golfers.

But she considers herself to be "a doer not a joiner," which means she prefers to help with a variety of activities in the community.

When the Dworskys moved to Lincoln from Los Angeles in 1968, Brandee found she had to adjust to the slower pace of life here. But she also found "the wide open spaces and the tremendous advantages of Lincoln.

She's Awed by Spring

"I love the feeling of Lincoln that I did not get in L.A.," she said. "When I moved here, I hadn't seen the stars in a long time. And I never knew what a season was until I came here. In L.A., we have hot days, cool days, rainy days. I'm awed by spring."

And, she observed, "people here take on the character of the seasons. When spring comes, they become more lighthearted."

Brandee and her husband Stan, a businessman, have three children, Steve, 14, Brad 12, and Suzi, 8. Brandee is a member of South Street Temple.

One of her favorite pastimes is gourmet foreign cooking.

Have you seen white signs, decorated with flowers, reading "Morley Kids Care?"

Have you wondered what they meant?

They identify with fourth graders at Morley School. The youngsters made the signs as a community project during the spring months.

Generous parents supplied the lumber and paint. The youngsters provided the nails, brushes and enthusiasm.

The Morley kids take pride in their conduct, appearance, attitude, thoughtfulness, behavior and many more things, according to Barbara Johnson, a fourth grade teacher. They are concerned about yards, flowers, parks, pets, birds and environment.

The signs usually are placed in the front yard of the home of a Morley student. They are proud of their signs and try to live up to the signs' philosophy.

Miss Victoria Martinson, school principal, perhaps had some second thoughts about the project as the grass on the school yard suddenly turned slightly white but the project continued.

Several boys from East High helped the teachers and students.

Miss Suzanne Perkins Weds Michael Palmer

Miss Suzanne Mary Perkins and Michael Edward Palmer of Denver were married in a Saturday noon ceremony at Cathedral of the Risen Christ.

The bride is the daughter of Dwight C. Perkins and the late Mrs. Perkins. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Palmer of Boulder, Colo.

Mrs. James P. Ronda of Youngstown, Ohio, was matron of honor. Miss Diane Perkins of Denver was maid of honor. The Misses Judy Palmer and Felice Tillman, both of Boulder, were bridesmaids.

Geoffrey Palmer of Boulder was best man. Philip Stone, Randy Little and Robert Gleason, all of Boulder, were groomsmen.

A reception was held at the Country Club of Lincoln.

After a wedding trip through Colorado, the couple will live in Boulder.

Rain drops sprinkled heads but didn't deter the Lincoln Symphony Orchestra from successfully completing its outdoor brown bag concert Saturday. It was staged on 12th St. between N and O.

Hog House Doors Bring $556

Three hog house doors brought $556 for the new Nebraska Baptist Growth Center near Linwood, when sealed bids were opened Saturday afternoon at the American Baptist convention.

The doors were taken from an old building on the Growth Center site and painted by Mrs. Winfred Pearson of Genoa, who donated them to the Baptists.

A still life brought $200, one rural Nebraska scene brought $250 and another $106.

Art Works Displayed

Fifth- and sixth-graders at Hartley School showed off their classwork creations last week and celebrated an afternoon with the arts.

The 120 pupils displayed their work at an afternoon show. They entertained their parents and friends with several musical selections.

Among the art pieces on display were homemade puppets, pottery, weaving, paintings, drawings and papier-mache creations.

The pupils also treated their guests to refreshments, including cookies which they made at school.

The musical program was directed by Herb Hackman, instrumental teacher, and Alice Miller, vocal teacher.

Other team teachers involved in the arts celebration were Katie Johnson, Nancy Carlson, Gertrude Berens, Bonnie Spomer, Doug Hellerich and Clarice Corn. Jean Shaw, media specialist, also assisted.

Mrs. Johnson said the pupils seemed "excited and pleased" with the activity.

Menswear Today

By Walter Logan

New York (UPI) — Andre Courreges, the Paris designer who put half the women of the world into knee length boots, is the latest of the high fashion designers to turn to men's wear. Not a complete line — "just the things I have a feeling for."

At a recent New York showing there were wool jersey knit slacks, precision-tailored and often in white. Sweaters, many in an orange-toned Courreges red, were borrowed from the girls and came in ribbed wool and acrylic pullovers, crew or turtleneck, in colors coordinated with the slacks.

There were such things as battle jackets in high shades of vinyl or combinations of vinyl and velvet, a blue weekend parka in lightweight nylon or white vinyl, lined with fake fur. Some of the battle jackets were shown with cotton satin slacks in matching colors. In addition to the reds there were soft greens teamed with white.

Bridegroom's Garb

In the good old days the bride's wedding dress set the tone for the whole wedding. If it was long and formal the men wore formal attire. If it was less formal the men followed suit. But now the bridegroom's garb is coloring the judgement of the bride.

After Six, probably the largest of the formal wear manufacturers, reports that the young bridegroom's wedding clothing is becoming so colorful the bride is beginning to color key her bridesmaids' gowns to the ruffle of the bridegroom's tangerine shirt or perhaps even the blushing pink of his dinner jacket.

And there are a few new looks in men's formal wear — The Ryder with a definite western influence, a Tuxtail which has longer tails but isn't quite a tailcoat and in everything from plaids to pastels with shirts that are ruffled, trimmed, ruched, pleated, or embroidered.

And now we have a Los Angeles shoe manufacturer whose motto is "Throw away your socks." A new line called Bare/Foot/Gear is specifically designed to be worn sockless. The theory is that removing the socks lets the air flow freely around the bare feet.

Alf Powers, originator of the shoe and executive vice-president of Nippon Rubber U.S.A. Corp., says the made-in-Japan shoes are made with a soft-cushioned leather lining that makes socks superfluous. They are mildly expensive — sneakers go for $22 and brown suede and leather sockless boots go for $58.

And if that startles you, Thom McAn Shoe Co., reports that shoe fashions have hit bottom. That's really a joke meaning the fashion interest is more solidly than ever on the soles and heels. Heels range from an inch to 2½ inches and platform soles vary from half an inch to up to two inches — a new record. On top? Nostalgia — saddle shoes and the like.

If you have trouble getting a suntan there is a new product that will speed things up. Coppertone has come out with something called a Sudden Tan bronzing foam. You push the button on the can and out comes a foam. You rub it on smoothly and you look sun-tanned while getting a real suntan. The fake tan will wash off with soap and water; the real tan stays on.

What Linings Mean

Something you probably never knew about neckties before: Leon Tirsch of Superba Cravats, Rochester, N.Y., reports that the lines found on the lining of most neckties really mean something. Five stripes and it is a very heavy lining to be used with thin silk. One stripe and you have a lightweight lining for wear with heavy wool outershells.

The price of the tie is not determined by the stripes of the inner lining but by the quality and design of the outer fabrics.

Knitwear manufacturers have added another layer to the layered look for Fall 1973. Jockey shows what it calls multiples — a knitted sports shirt and a coordinated sweater set — a slipcover and a cardigan in broad matching horizontal stripes. Alps teamed an argyle knitted vest with a white shirtstyle sweater. Lord Jeff made a set out of a cable stitched cardigan and a turtleneck.

'Mental Health Feels Good'—Client

"I don't understand," said the distressed mother, "our daughter used to be so pleasant and enjoyed being a part of the family."

The parents of a fifteen-year-old daughter went on to describe changes in their daughter's behavior in the last year which included angry outbursts, isolating herself from her family, argumentativeness, and challenge of limits. The parents were in pain — but so was the daughter.

Adolescence, especially ages 14-17, is generally recognized as about life's most stressful period. And, sometimes, one of the primary tasks of parenting — helping the child to successfully separate from the family — is forgotten. Separation is often regarded by both parents and adolescents with two way feelings of ectasy and anxiety.

The parents were able to concentrate on this in their talk with the mental health counselor and what life would be like when their children were reared and they had this new freedom. A basically good marriage was described but there were concerns about how they might handle loneliness and what their own relationship as husband and wife would be like.

There were some nagging concerns registered by both of them about their relationship as husband and wife. Any display of anger between them was considered by them as personally threatening and very immature. They sometimes used excuses to avoid disagreements and having children around helped.

If the couple started to talk about problem areas, the many intrusions inevitable in a busy family interrupted or were allowed to always interrupt any real resolution of their differences. The phone rang, mother had to take one of the children someplace, father had to repair the son's bike, something was burning on the stove, etc. The problem remained unsolved, and husband and wife retreated into their characteristic way of coping with problems. The husband became depressed, quiet, and distant. The wife became irritable and tired at bedtime

They soon learned that the interviews with the mental health counselor were not interrupted, and although at times were uncomfortable, helped them to talk through some of their differences and explore their discomforts. Gradually, the couple found that open differences even with some honest expression of anger need not be devastating and could be highly productive to them as individuals, to their marriage, and for the family.

As they became more confident about coping with problems between themselves they were more ready to talk about problems with their adolescent daughter. They commented that their daughter's outbursts of anger were better tolerated by them, although admitting they wished it were not quite so often, but that it aided them in communicating with her through better listening, expressing themselves, and making appropriate compromises with her in helping her to learn to handle more independence.

There was some comfort in learning that the daughter's anger, in part, served to help with the separation process. Essentially, the daughter was seen as saying, "I, too, must help myself to separate from you. It is difficult for us both and my arguments and angry behavior sometimes help to serve this purpose . . ."

The daughter was able to pinpoint some of her concerns which included the feeling that children and adolescents are sometimes held under a microscope. After all, she exclaimed, "How often are there report cards on parents?"

The above situation is common to the mental health workers at the Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center, as well as to other counseling agencies. Increasingly, people are seen as developing a more healthy self-interest and are referring themselves to places like the Mental Health Center before the problems take on crisis proportions. Some are beginning to compare going for help with their personal problems to going to a dentist or a physician with their physical problems. As one client finally put it, "mental health feels good."

The Lincoln-Lancaster Mental Health Center, 134 South 13th, is available to all residents of Lancaster County. Individual, group, marriage, family therapy, and community consultation and education are among the services offered. Charges for therapy are based on iincome and ability to pay.

Quotable Quotes

Here are some quotable quotes from women during the week:

"Poor people start saving from the day the daughter is born. The wedding becomes a sort of panacea for all our fears, a status symbol that says we made it big and daddy can send his daughter off in materialistic style. America's term for success." Marcia Seligson speaking about her new novel, "The Eternal Bliss Machine."

"It's all very simple. My engagement (to Arnaz) — our relationship — had been deteriorating for some time — pleasantly, luckily. We are no longer engaged. It's all called off." Actress Liza Minnelli.

"All my life I've worked within the system's organized groups, taking around petitions and filling in for speakers. I labored in the vineyards for 15 years before I ran for Congress and I've been able to assess the weaknesses and strengths of many of my opponents.

"I can explain to young people that they must work in the system. They can't just tilt at windmills." Rep. Shirley Chisholm, D. N.Y.

"So many kids are living ridiculous kinds of lives. I just couldn't pull off being a hippie. I was too clean-cut for it." Actress Katie Hanley, hit singer in the movie "Godspell."

"The big problem in New York, as in any other city or state, is that the disabled are disorganized. The emphasis is on the disability rather than on the problems that the disabled have in common." Eunice Fiorite, head of a newly created Mayor's Office for the Handicapped in New York.

New Window Treatment

By Emily Malino

Not everyone has an expansive picture window or a pair of handsome French doors. In fact, many of us have a pair of very plain Jane windows, often too narrow for the wall in which they stand and too small to be significant.

For years, the trend has been to conceal: hang a traverse track on the ceiling and drape the wall from corner to corner, engulfing the windows in a sea of fabric. Or, perhaps, to stretch the window by hanging a pole above it and arranging a wide panel of fabric on either side.

Today, however, most of us are looking for new options for windows. We are tired of paying for the laundry or dry cleaning of endless yards of fabrics; we are equally bored with the impersonal cliche of a pair of drapery panels, no matter how trendy the fabric or how ornate the cornice.

Today's people don't want to devote hours to maintaining anything as unnecessary as collected yardage of dusty fabric. They are choosing sensible, practical window coverings that provide privacy and light control without costing an arm-and-a-leg or requiring regular monotonous maintenance.

These new alternatives — shades, shutters, blinds, screens, or any of the many other ideas contemporary designers have dreamed up — are not radical or modern or really new at all.

Build a frame of stock four-by-four lumber for the top and sides of each window. The frame should be about six to 12 inches from the window on all sides — the actual space is determined by placing the top beam midway between the ceiling and the top of the window. The side beams should be the same distance from the window as the top.

Now, choosing a deep, rich color you like — rust red or earth brown or navy blue — paint the walls outside and inside the new frames on all sides of the real window. Or, if you like white walls, leave the new wood frame a natural or stained color, and paint the wall inside and outside the frame pure white.

Choose a simple window covering. A shade in a solid color or a stripe that blends the color of your wall and your trim would be two perfect possibilities. Or use a matchstick bamboo blind or vertical vanes in white or off-white to match the bold new frame. Or even a pair of shutters, painted to match the wall color or the frame.

Some Couples Like Pets More Than Kids

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I can't understand the logic of the young couples who don't want to have children because "there are already too many people fouling up the environment." Yet they have a dog or a cat, or both. Don't animals breathe oxygen and excrete waste? I'm for ecological preservation, but what about this nonsense? — I Like Kids

Dear I.L.K.: Any couple who would rather have a pet than a child should have it. It's their right. I'd hate to be born into a family that would rather have had a dog or a cat. How about you?

Dear Ann Landers: Regarding that young man who didn't know how to tell his fiancee her neck was dirty: You said it could be her jewelry. Another possibility is a skin pigmentation problem. I know because I have it. It used to be embarrassing when people stared at my neck. I knew they were wondering why I didn't wash it. I was tempted to say, "Look, it's a skin defect," but in recent years I've become accustomed to it and it doesn't bother me.

Please inform your readers not to jump to conclusions. A discolored neck doesn't necessarily mean the girl doesn't care for soap and water. High Collar Henrietta

Dear Hen: Right you are. In fact there's a two-bit word for that skin problem. It is "poikiloderma." Some of my best friends are dermatologists.

Dear Ann Landers: I am only 27 years old but I'm afraid I'll look like 50 in a year or two. My hair is turning grey and my husband will not permit me to touch it up. What bothers me more than anything is that my mother-in-law keeps asking me what I'm worried about. When I tell her I am not worried about anything she insists I am hiding something, because a person doesn't get grey "for no reason" at such an early age.

Does grey hair come from worry or is this an old wives' tale? The Old Grey Mare

Dear Mare: Grey hair is the result of glandular secretions. It has nothing to do with worry. Heredity is the major factor. As I've said before in this space, I love grey hair. On other people.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm married to some kind of a nut who thinks every physical problem is caused by something emotional. This goes for headaches, backaches, fallen arches, and even a head cold.

Last week my face broke out. I'm sure it was something I ate but my husband says no — it's emotional. I had acne when I was a teen-ager and this eruption looks a lot like the old stuff but I can't believe a 38-year-old woman would break out with a fresh case of acne.

I'm not asking for a diagnosis through the mail. What I want to know is this: Is there any connection between acne and emotional problems? I say no. What do your dermatologists say? Philadelphia Reader

Dear Phil: They say yes. In fact, it is not uncommon for a person who has a history of acne to get reoccurrences during times of stress all through his adult years. The skin is often a true reflector of one's emotional state.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Would you please clarify a bidding situation for our beginners' group? If an opponent opens one heart and the next player bids three clubs, how does the partner know which of these two example hands the three-club bidder may hold?

Double Meaning
Plano, Tex.

Answer: The meaning of a jump overcall is entirely a matter of system. Modern treatment is to play it as a weak pre-emptive bid. In theory, most strong hands can be described by other means — double, overcall or cue bids. There is no substitute for system agreement between partners, especially in the ambiguous bidding areas.

Dear Mr. Corn:

May I have your opinion regarding a bidding problem? North and South are two life masters with over 1,500 points each. What would you bid with the South hand after this bidding (East's two-diamond bid was a weak bid)?

Need Arbitration
Chicago

Answer: Two bids are acceptable, but a pass is out! The choice lies between a club raise or a diamond cue bid. I have a preference for the cue bid, since it is more flexible and leaves the road open to a possible three-no-trump contract. The club raise may commit you to a black-suit contract.

Dear Mr. Corn:

Can a player stop the deal and ask for another cut of the cards?

Luck Change
San Francisco

Answer: I quote from the Laws of Contract Bridge: "There must be a new cut if any player demands one before the first card is dealt. In this case the dealer's right-hand opponent cuts again."

'Boating Safety Is No Accident'

"Boating safety is no accident"

Endorsing that U.S. Coast Guard slogan are members of the newly chartered local Coast Guard Auxiliary Sailing Flotilla 14-3. The auxiliary is a civilian organization under Coast Guard auspices.

A recent Coast Guard survey indicated that only 20% of all boaters had had any kind of formal education in boat safety and handling

Such ignorance can lead to accidents. In 1972, over 1500 people in the United States died in boating accidents, with 800 reported boating injuries and some $7 million in property damage

To combat this, the auxiliary will hold sailing and water safety classes for five consecutive Mondays beginning June 4, according to Commander Frank Roth.

The sessions will begin at 7 30 p m and will be held in the Great Hall at the Red Cross Bldg, 1701 E Boats will be in the hall for demonstrations

Topics will include getting to know the boat, under way — theory and practice, basic boat handling — rigging the boat, hoisting the sail and docking, light weather sailing and rigs, rough weather sailing, and sailors seamanship — knots, lines and boat maintenance

Instructors will be Russell Smith, James Harper, Frank Wunderlich and Steven Ketelsen

The classes are open to the public

Catholics Battle Against Sham

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

New York (AP) — On both sides of the fence, among church defenders and reformers, groups of Roman Catholics have organized recently to do battle against what they see as sham, slights and slurs regarding their religion.

In the case of a newly formed women's group, it also aims to fight asserted ecclesiastical insults to their sex. It will "receive and publicize reports of specific cases of discrimination and degradation suffered by Catholic women within the church," says Frances McGillicuddy, president of the St. Joan's Alliance.

Francis McGillicuddy, president of the St. Joan's Alliance

On a wider front, another unofficial Catholic group recently was set up to combat misinformation about the church and what it considers signs of rekindled anit-Catholicism in the country.

Both groups took their cue from the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, a long-time organization set up to expose prejudice, misrepresentation and slander against Jews.

Borrowing the name itself, the women's group was designated the "Anti-Defamation Committee" of St. Joan's Alliance, a group favoring equal status for women in the church, including the priesthood.

Christian principles demand "equality of the sexes," the group said. "We are feminists because we are Catholic." The committee, headed by Victoria Slind Flor of Bellevue, Wash., plans to start publishing in the Alliance bulletin a regular column, called "Horror Scope," detailing cases alleging church violations of women's rights.

The other group, called the Catholic League for Religious and Civil Rights, said it was modeled both on the Jewish Anti-Defamation group and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Christians Pray for Peace in Ireland

Geneva/Rome — The following communique was issued by Dr. Philip A. Potter, General Secretary of the World Council of Churches, and John Cardinal Willebrands, President of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity:

"At Pentecost 1973 Christians in all parts of the world will unite with their fellow-Christians in Ireland to pray for peace in this conflict-torn country. According to an announcement made in Geneva and Rome today, in a letter sent recently by John Cardinal Willebrands, President of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity, and Dr. Philip A. Potter, General Secretary of the World Council of Churches, to all Episcopal Conferences of the Roman Catholic Church and to Member Churches of the World Council of Churches as well as to National Christian Councils the proposal of an 'ecumenical initiative to promote understanding and to pray for peace in Ireland' is being developed.

The initiative originated earlier this year in the Steering Committee of Sodepax, the Roman Catholic/World Council of Churches' committee on Society, Development and Peace. Sodepax had been actively concerned about the situation in Ireland for a long period. The proposal received the warm approval not only of the leaders of the churches in Ireland but equally of the appropriate authorities of the Holy See and of the World Council of Churches. The group of sponsors includes in addition John Cardinal Heenan, Archbishop of Westminster, Dr. Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of Canterbury, the Rt. Rev. R. Selby Wright, Moderator of the Church of Scotland, Dr. W. A. Visser 't Hooft, Honorary President of the World Council of Churches, and Terence Cardinal Cooke of New York.

The initiative arises from the conviction that 'concerned effort of prayer would contribute to the atmosphere in which peace can grow.' It equally aims at creating 'a climate for better understanding of the situation of Christians in Ireland at this difficult time' and might thus assist 'in correcting the often simplistic and exaggerated impression given by many newspaper and television reports that the conflict in Ireland is mainly a religious one.'

The letter to the churches around the world inviting them to join in this effort has been accompanied by some suggestions for prayers to be used in liturgies and also by a selection of recent statements by Irish church leaders concerning the situation of the country."

Spoken to the World From Lincoln

Witness of the Baptist Convention

Well, can't we open ourselves again to Jesus Christ? This is not easy language for me. Most of my life I thought if I read enough books and went to enough lectures I would understand one day the mystery that energy comes from Jesus Christ and our exposure to him. But I still don't understand it. Yet neither can I deny it. All that study only added dimension and majesty to mystery.

The Rev. Dr. Gene E. Bartlett,
President of American Baptist Churches

Our evangelism in the 60s was not wrong in its suggestion that Christ's promise is to the whole of life; to us in our institutions. It was, however, often too shallow; misperceiving both the depth of God's judgment on our common life and the depth of the struggle needed to reach out to the new possibilities God offers.

The Rev. Dr. Colin W. Williams
Dean of Yale University Divinity School

If we are to hear the words O.D. (Overdose) let it be used to indicate commitment, involvement, active participation, prayer, goodwill, creativity, vitality, love and such like. For, in the words of the Bible . . "against such there is no law."

Ms. Violet M. Ankrum,
President, Women's Department,
Progressive National Baptist Convention

The church for gay people is a necessary heresy until the straight churches see homosexuals as whole persons in Jesus Christ.

The Rev. Rodger Harrison,
Pastor of Christ Chapel,
Costa Mesa, Calif

One thing that has impressed me at this convention is a sense of having questions and not knowing the answers. The Lord is the answer! When the Lord has filled your life, there is a breakthrough into a whole new dimension of living in which everything changes.

Witness at a meeting of Charismatic Baptists

Baptists and Catholics have more in common than we had thought, even though we oftentimes expressed it in different languages.

Bishop Joseph Green,
Diocese of Reno, Nevada

We all draw back from the sting of trouble and from the pain of being wounded. It is natural for us to want to avoid pain and discomfiture. Only the morbidly diseased person courts hurt and enjoys being wounded. So many of us are obsessive on the other side: we intend to avoid pain and trouble at any price. "I don't want to get hurt" is the theme of so many of us. We go through life studiously avoiding all situations that might involve damaged emotions and bruised feelings.

The Rev. Dr. Gardner C. Taylor,
Pastor of the Concord Baptist Church,
Brooklyn, N.Y.

The more I observe contemporary America, the more I read about the history of the church, and the more I study the Scriptures, the more I sense how dangerous it is to merge piety with our patriotism.

Senator Mark O. Hatfield,
Republican and Baptist from Oregon

The revolution of the elders, unlike all others, has a universalizing effect. All of us are aging and if we manage to survive we will all be old some day.

Ms. Margaret E. Kuhn,
Convenor of the Gray Panthers.

Missouri Will Ask Synod Delegates to Close Seminary

St. Louis (AP) — Missouri Synod Lutherans convening at New Orleans in July will be asked to close down Concordia Seminary in Clayton, Mo., because of alleged Bible misinterpretation, a synod spokesman said Wednesday.

At least eight congregations in the 3 million-member synod have recommended the closing because seminary faculty members have "erred from the truth of the Scriptures," the spokesman said.

A proposal to dismiss faculty members who refuse to sign statements of Scripture and confessional principles has been recommended by 20 congregations, the spokesman said.

Dr. Jacob A. O. Preus, synod president, appointed a fact-finding committee three years ago to investigate biblical interpretation on the part of Concordia faculty members.

A controvsery since then has raged on how literal the interpretations should be. But only one faculty member has been forced to resign.

To be considered by delegates attending the synod convention beginning July 6 at New Orleans will be 371 resolutions channeled from congregations through committee.

A church in Casper, Wyo., asked that the convention "remove or fire the entire faculty" at Concordia. The same resolution asked for the firing of seminary President Dr. John H. Tietjen.

Concordia faculty members, the resolution contends, "are obstinate and refuse to reconsider their doctrinal error."

Gudelsky: My Faith Restored

Muskegon, Mich. (AP) — David Gudelsky said his faith in man was restored when he received $18 owed his family's defunct clothing store.

The $18 bill had been owed for an overcoat and pair of shoes purchased 42 years ago during the depression. The store closed in 1931.

Deafness Cured By Acupuncture

Brighton, England (UPI) — Myra Webb, deaf for 14 years, said she heard the sound of a blackbird singing Friday and proclaimed, "it's wonderful."

She said she is the first person in Britain cured of deafness by acupuncture, the ancient Chinese needle therapy.

You develop from a somewhat disorganized behavior as a child into a more or less organized adult. You have been motivated toward certain goals and achievements in your environment. Through your education, both in and out of school, you have learned to cope as you do with conflicts of all kinds. You have learned how to choose and many of your choices, more than anyone suspects, are based on your childhood education and experiences. Why, then, allow yourself to make enemies? It's the same for every other person as it is for you.

Daffy Definitions:

An agnostic is somebody who doesn't believe in God. That is some people all of the time and all people some of the time.

An atheist is one who is willing to face the full consequences of what it means to say there is no God. The atheist may think it's wrong to murder a child, but if he encounters someone who disagrees he has no higher authority to invoke in choosing one view over the other.

House of the Week By Andy Lang, AP

Good Life Centered on Foyer

Not very often (in fact, never) have we begun a discussion of a House of the Week extolling the virtues of the entrance foyer.

This time we do, because it's something special—large, with two guest closets, a planter and a special air of elegance. Even more important, it is the floor plan's nucleus from which the formal, informal and sleeping areas are directly accessible. The living room, dining room and family room come immediately into view, giving guests an impressive panorama. Yet, when privacy is desired, the dining room and the family room can be closed off from the foyer with attractive folding doors

Appropriately, architect Herman H. York has designated this spacious area inside the front door as the "Grand Foyer."

The kitchen and family room are integrated, with only a low wrought iron railing between them, creating a practical informal living arrangement. Such a kitchen-family room relationship is not a new concept but a logical one. While Mom is preparing meals and doing the other endless tasks that take place in the kitchen, she is not isolated from the family group and can participate in family discussions and even see the fire in the brick fireplace. Both kitchen and family room are accessible to the rear terrace providing an additional feature of complete indoor-outdoor living.

The U-shaped kitchen counter is considered to be an efficient and practical layout. It eliminates the danger of accidents caused by carrying boiling hot water, roasts and other such items across the floor from one counter to another.

The laundry area has a direct relation to the kitchen, service entry, oversized two-car garage and cellar stairway and obviously is well situated. The laundry also provides an excellent area to discard rain and snow apparel, incorporating a mud closet for proper storage of weather gear, since it is located at the side service entrance.

All four bedrooms in the sleeping area have generous wall space for furniture arrangement. This kind of wall space allows a choice of placement for furniture, so often desirable.

Besides providing ample storage, the closets act as a noise buffer zone between bedrooms 1, 2 and 4. The radio or phonograph can be played softly without disturbing anyone in the adjoining rooms. There are two linen closets to accommodate the requirements of a large family.

A special feature of the bathrooms is the separate tub and stall shower facilities for both the owner and his family The split bath can be shared by two persons, each in complete privacy There's also a powder room off the foyer.

R-14 Statistics

Design R-14 has a living room, dining room, family room, kitchen, four bedrooms, two bathrooms, a powder room, laundry room and large foyer, totaling 2205 square feet. There is a two-car garage with a considerable amount of storage space The over-all dimensions of 83' 4" by 53' include the garage.

Grand Old Man, Sam Wants to Work for You

By Steve Ellingson
Special Writer

Show your colors (the red, white and blue) by making this Grand Old Man into either a mailbox holder or flagpole stand, or by building both units pictured here with Jeffrey Williams of NBC's Days Of Our Lives series.

Uncle Sam, the curbside mailbox holder, is built around a 2 x 4 as solid support.

If you don't have curbside mail service build just the Uncle Sam flagpole stand. The pattern shows how to support the figure on a broad plywood base. Stand it up on your lawn for Memorial Day, July 4 and other national holidays (or every day!). The whole display moves easily from outdoors to indoor storage.

Both units can be made from this one pattern. Simply trace the full-size figure onto some plywood, saw out and paint by numbers. Step-by-step pictures and directions guide you all the way.

To obtain the Uncle Sam Mailbox Holder and Flagstand Pattern No. 529, send $1 (add 25¢ per pattern for airmail delivery) by cash, check or money order to:

Your Nurseryman Speaks

Plants to Tame Nebraska Winds

She was from Narion, Ohio She had moved into one of Lincoln's newer subdivisions. The constant wind made her uneasy, uncomfortable. Sometimes it frightened her.

Those of us who have lived in Nebraska all of our lives may find this difficult to understand. Nonetheless, this is, by no means, an unusual reaction. I've heard out-of-staters complain about our wind time after time during the last 20 years.

How can these people build themselves a natural sanctuary from the wind?

One of the fastest, most reasonable ways is to turn the entire property into a large courtyard by planting poplars on the property lines wherever possible.

Of course, every time poplars are mentioned, 90% of all plant lovers immediately turn up their noses and walk away. Well, every plant, no matter what its drawbacks, has some role to play somewhere. And the role of the poplar is to screen, to slow the wind quickly, with minimal cost.

The newer Theves poplar overcomes some of the drawbacks of the Lombardy. Moreover, it can be removed after ten years when more desirable, slower-growing plants have taken over the wind-slowing job.

Since the poplar has soft wood, it can be easily removed with a chain saw and the stumps can be painted with 2-4,D so they will not sprout.

As a more permanent wind-slower, pines are an excellent choice. When purchased in sizes from one to three feet, they are inexpensive. For evergreens, they grow quickly.

If space is not available for the broader-growing pines, upright junipers will do the job.

No one wants poplars to surround his entire front yard. What alternate plants can be used there?

The problem of the constant wind is, by no means new to this city. It was obviously worst when Lincoln was only a new village on the open plain.

In studying Lincoln's older homes, a person soon discovers that much privet hedge was planted.

In some cases, this privet has been permitted to grow to a height of ten feet before being trimmed. This plant has the great advantage of being trimmable at any height.

Moreover, it is extremely adaptable in solving a variety of wind problems. It can be held at five feet or eight feet or ten feet dependent upon the particular need of the property.

Of course, opaque fencing is another answer to the wind. Its limitation is that it can not be built higher than six feet in this city in most instances.

One of the better fences is vertical adjustable louvered. When the wind blows fiercely, it can be excluded. When it's a gentle zephyr, it can be invited in.

Garden Gossip

Apple, Crab Scab Is Caused by Fungus

By Emery W. Nelson
County Extension Agent

Many flowering crab and apple trees are again infected with a disease called scab. This is a fungus disease that is most severe when the weather is cool and moist at the time the leaves unfold. This year the weather was most favorable for the fungus.

The first symptoms of the disease are usually small, olive-covered areas on the surface of the leaves. They often increase in size and darken with age. Sometimes they take on a velvety appearance because of the abundant production of spores on the infected area. Later the spot may turn brown, the leaf may dry and in severe infections the leaves may fall.

Apple scab can be prevented by spraying with fungicides. The control program needs to be started early as leaves can be infected when the bud begins to open. Repeating the spray application every week until the weather becomes warm and dry is important since the disease can spread rapidly.

Fungicides that will control scab are Maneb, Captan or Zineb. Both sides of the leaves need to be covered with one of these chemicals to prevent the development of the fungus.

WHAT IS MY HOME WORTH?

Q. I'm interested in knowing what my home is worth. Is an appraisal the same as an estimate of market value?

A. Different terms are used in different ways by different people, but actually an appraisal is a formal, written, estimate of value for which the appraiser is paid a specific fee. If you are considering selling property, any Realtor will inspect your property and advise you what price to expect on the current market. There is no obligation and generally no fee for this.

In the cases of properties commonly bought and sold, such as residences, farms, 4-Plexes etc., the Realtor who is regularly handling such sales is generally the most capable of advising a potential seller (or buyer). With respect to more complex properties like office buildings, stores, apartment complexes etc., it usually requires the services of a Realtor who also specializes in fee appraising.

Q. My mother owns an older home in I-Commercial zoning. Is its value based on its present single family use?

A. Not necessarily. This problem requires two separate value estimates: 1. What is its value as a residence regardless of zoning? 2. What is the value of the land for a new use less the cost of removing the buildings? The higher of the answers is probably what the property can be expected to bring in the open market. There must, of course, be a demand for the new use and such use must be legal and appropriate to the area.

Fultz Journal-Star Prep Athlete of Year

By Randy York
Prep Sports Writer

Mike Fultz isn't about to pretend athletics have come easy for him the last three years.

As a black athlete (the first named in the 23-year history of the Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star High School Athlete of the Year award), Fultz has been "torn between two worlds."

"There's been a lot of pressure on me," admits the 6-5½, 250-pound Nebraska-bound football player and state shot put record-holder.

"At Lincoln High, there's a black and there's a white," explains Fultz. "That's why it's a heckuva place because that's the way life is, too."

Fultz, who grew up in a poor family "which struggled for everything we have," found himself caught in the middle of innumerable situations "with my black friends and my white friends."

At times, it was a psychological tug-of-war to keep his own piece of mind, but Fultz, in his own words, "gutted it out. I won't ever quit anything. I expect to work hard and excel."

Indeed he has, winning the Athlete of the Year award over such outstanding candidates as Sidney's Rick Seidel, Fairbury's Bob Siegel, Omaha Rummel's Ed Burns and Boys Town's Barney Hill.

Only one Lincoln athlete, Northeast's Maury Damkroger, had claimed such an honor in the previous 10 years.

For Fultz, it's the culmination of years of "blood, sweat and tears", all of which started on a little dirt lot on T Street, which has served as a springboard for such black Lincoln athletes as Bobby Williams.

"We played everything on the same lot . . . football, basketball, everything. That's where all the blacks got their start. I had to learn against people like Ken Adkins and Lynn Finney," relates Fultz.

Longshot Brush Cutter Victor

By Virgil Parker

Omaha — Brush Cutter nipped even-money favorite Annihilate 'Em at the wire to win the featured His Majesty's Council Handicap over six furlongs on a sloppy track at Ak-Sar-Ben here Saturday.

The three-year-old, trained and ridden by the father-son combination of Lyman and Bradley Rollins, ran the distance in 1:41.1 to return a whopping $44.20, $12.00 and $8.20 to his backers among the crowd of 23,893.

The feature, a $25,000-added handicap with a gross purse of $27,000, earned $14,850 for owner George McLoughlin of Sun City, Ariz., who was not in attendance

"He'll be glad to accept a collect phone call from me after the way the race turned out," trainer Lyman Rollins assured.

"I didn't know what to think of our chances with all those big horses from the east in the race," son-jockey Bradley admitted, "but Brush Cutter was only a second off the world's record in winning his only other start this year (5½ furlongs in 1:02.2 in Phoenix) so I knew he was a good horse."

Annihilate 'Em, leading at the head of the stretch, momentarily stumbled as the winner went by on the outside to gain the photo finish decision.

"Brad rode him just right," father Lyman reported. "The rail seemed firm in the backstretch, but I noticed that the winners were running wide in the stretch.

"When he first turned for home it didn't look like he was doing too good, but then Brad moved him even farther out into the middle of the track and that made the difference."

Like owner McLoughlin, Brush Cutter almost didn't make it to Ak-Sar-Ben for the race.

"We left Denver with him in a three-horse van last Monday morning," Lyman reported. "We should have been in Omaha by three in the afternoon."

Rollins said a flat tire on the van started a series of mishaps.

"The rubber on the tire whipped around and bent the tail pipe up against the bottom of the van, but we didn't know it," he related.

"After changing the tire we drove about 30 miles and the hot tail pipe caught the van on fire. It was quite a blaze going before somebody waved at us and we realized what was wrong."

Lyman said several truckers stopped to help. "About five guys came running up with fire extinguishers, but none of them worked. I got the horses out and Bradley finally stopped the fire, but not before it had burned a big hole in the floor of the van."

That wasn't the end of the problems. Later, the lug bolts on the van wheel which had had the flat tire sheered off.

"We were really lucky the whole rig didn't tip over when that happened," he said.

Following all that excitement, the Rollins' then missed the turnoff, drove down through Kansas and finally arrived in Omaha about midnight.

"But, it didn't upset the horse as much as us," Lyman added. "When I unloaded Brush Cutter while we fought the fire he just went over to the side of the road and started grazing."

Rollins felt the trip down from Denver was beneficial to Brush Cutter, however.

"I think coming from the high altitude was a big factor in his winning," he said. "You can't go from here and race well the first time out in Denver (because of the high altitude), but the other way around it works out very well."

Rollins wasn't too pleased with the 1:14.1 clocking, but admitted he liked the outcome.

"I told Brad to stay within striking distance, then get to the middle of the track for the stretch run."

Annihilate 'Em, which returned $3.40 and 13.20 to place and show horse Norman Regret ($4.20) couldn't argue with the strategy.

Neither could the big crowd, a record turnout for a non-holiday Saturday, which topped by two the number of patrons on hand on May 25, 1966.

Muzzle Loaders Relive History

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Brownville — "I can kind of imagine what it would have been like for a guy back in those days when he was hungry and needed food to have to go out and shoot it. There's nothing like it," said John Trimble of Humboldt.

Trimble was talking of shooting his muzzle loaded flintlock rifle. The "long guns" similar to those used by our forefathers in the settlement of America.

Trimble and over fifty other muzzle loaders took part in the two-day shoot, a portion of Brownville's annual Memorial weekend festivities The flee market and muzzle loading shoot are co-sponsored by the Brownville Historical Society and the Great Plains Muzzle Loaders of Lincoln.

The fourth annual shoot is among the largest shoots for any rifle competition in the state Last year over 90 participants made it the state's largest Weather hindered the turnout for this year's event, however

The muzzle loaders are a hardy looking sort They are shooters, many of whom are trying to relate with the history of our land.

"I was about 10 years old and started reading Richard Roberts, an American historian," reports Lincoln's Jerry Franks. He then met Lincolnite Dick Hedges. The two made Jerry a flintlock and he was on his way.

"The realization that we are duplicating what our forefathers did in the 17th and 18th centuries is part of the enjoyment," Franks said of shooting the muzzle loader. "This is what they used to do."

"There are a lot of reasons a guy wants to shoot a flintlock," Trimble picked up. "The best shots and the guys who seem to have the most fun shooting shoot flintlocks.

"I've always done a lot of shooting," added the Humboldt farmer "It got to the point it wasn't too much sport to hunt any more But if you go out and shoot something with one of these it gives you a feeling of accomplishing something.

"The whole idea in the hunting with a flintlock is to get a little closer. There are guys around here who have shot deer, squirrel, rabbit, turkey, just about everything with a flintlock."

Part of the fun, too, would have to be dressing to fit the time period.

Rain Hampers Great Plains

By Randy Eickhoff

Rain halted play in the Great Plains Golf Classic at Holmes Golf Course Saturday afternoon midway through the first day of the two-day tournament.

Ignoring the driving rain, Rocky Waite and John Colliate of Wichita, Kansas playing against former State Amateur champions Bob Astleford and Frank Rose of Omaha came into the clubhouse with an eight under par 64 while Astleford and Rose teamed for a two under 70 in the best ball scratch division of the tourney.

"They (Waite and Colliate) were nine under when we teed off on 18," Astleford, eight-time state champion said.

"But then they bogeyed on their last hole to put them eight under."

Waite and Colliate's big boost came on number 18 which they eagled, they parred nine and birdied ten, eleven, and twelve in succession.

With Astleford and Rose boasting a two under 70, of the five remaining groups yet to play three had scores of one or two under. A total of ten teams will have to finish play Sunday.

The last flight in the scratch division, Gary Teal and Mike Golter were laying one under after playing 11 holes.

"The rain caught up with us when we teed off on number 16," Astleford said. "But we decided since we were this close that we would finish out instead of returning tomorrow to finish up."

Astleford and Rose played the front nine in even par while their opponents were five under at the turn.

On the eleventh and twelfth holes Astleford and Rose birdied then finished out the back nine in even par for their two under. Those two scores, Waite-Colliate and Astleford-Rose, were the two best scores at the conclusion of 18.

Second round play was originally scheduled to begin with the same tee times at Pioneers Golf Course Sunday with the top twelve in the handicap division and the top ten in the scratch being paired for later tee times.

But with the rainout players who did not finish their rounds Saturday will pick up where they left off Sunday morning before starting the Pioneers course.

Indy Carnival Concludes Monday

'500' More Than Car Race

Indianapolis — When the starter's flag drops on the Indianapolis "500" Monday, a chunk of your future lifestyle will be riding along.

Your next car, your breakfast prunes, the tires you ride on — even your choice of a toilet seat could be influenced by auto racing's oldest and richest event.

Outwardly, the race appears to be simply a contest of who gets there first.

But it's also a rich, almost unmatched pageant, reflecting a cross-section of the hopes, motivations and ambitions of 20th Century USA.

Indy is a one-ring circus with an act for everyone — the Walter Mitty who dreams of himself in a driver's seat, the fashion designer in search of inspiration and the scores of manufacturers of auto accessories, safety equipment and tires to whom the race is a test of today's product and an insight into tomorrow's innovation.

And in the 56 times the race has been run, Indy never has let them down.

From the day in 1911 when the first rear-view mirror was placed on an Indianapolis racing car, the sport has been a productive research laboratory for hundreds of products taken for granted today.

Almost every part of an automobile — from disk brakes to shock absorbers to engines — was first tried or refined on the track before becoming commercial reality.

Racing is responsible for more efficient auto fuels and lubricants. It led to the development of the bias-belted auto tire, a construction now standard on most new cars.

And today, with the remarkable increase in racing speeds, a promising new set of values has become available to the engineer and designer.

May has been a month of super speeds at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Twenty-six of the 33 cars in the starting field exceeded 190 miles an hour in their 10-mile, fourlap qualifying runs.

And the fastest among them, pole winner Johnny Rutherford, came within a whisker of a 200 mph lap.

It took 43 years for Indy's one-lap record to climb from 100 to 143 mph.

Yet in just the last 11 years, there has been such an increase in speed that Rutherford was just a quarter of a second away from 200 mph on a track designed for half that speed.

Where is all the speed coming from?

Three interrelated factors are responsible — dramatic improvements in engines, refinements in chassis design and tire technology.

Today's lightweight Indianapolis racing cars are powered by engines made of aluminum and magnesium alloys. Mounted on the rear of the car, the engines are turbocharged with an exhaust-driven blower that creates pressure in the intake manifold and can boost output up to 1,000 horsepower.

Twenty-six of the cars are powered by four-cyclinder Offenhauser engines. Introduced 51 years ago, the durable "Offy" periodically has been proclaimed dead, but always seems to pull a foot out of the grave and arise more powerful and reliable than ever.

Chassis design has changed remarkably in recent years. From the bulky, front-engine roadsters of 10 years ago, the cars have become low-slung, sleek machines. They are equipped with "wings," or airfoils, designed to create tremendous downward pressure and provide extra "bite," or traction, for the tires.

That leaves tires — and these four points of contact between the driver and the track may be the real key to the increase in speed. They have reached the same height of sophistication as the exotic cars they carry.

Much lower and lighter than tires on the family automobile, Indianapolis racing tires have no tread pattern. The rubber that meets the track is slick and as thin as a pane of window glass.

However, a set of tires is designed to last the entire race with all its grueling speeds and 800 left turns.

Compounded of sophisticated blends of man-made rubber and reinforced with specially treated nylon cord, tires used in the "500" are practically "baldies" — smooth, "tacky" creations that hug the track — especially in the turns — at speeds never before possible on the 2½-mile Indianapolis oval.

Of all the industries and businesses involved in auto racing — the list includes the operator of a motel chain, a marketer of prunes and makers of motor homes, gas and oil, cigarettes, piston rings, beer, seat belts, oil additives, and even toilet seats and flower pots — the tire industry benefits the most.

With the withdrawal of the auto companies from active participation in racing, the tire makers, more than anyone else, have made the race tracks proving grounds for tomorrow's product.

The wide tread tire, now standard on many automobiles, was tired, tested and proven on the race track.

Innovations in fabric, rubber and even tread patterns used on racing tires have been passed on to the consumer in the form of safer, more efficient tires for passenger cars.

But it is Indy's rich purse that tops $1 million, plus the fame, the endorsements, personal appearances and other recognition, that beckons the drivers, mechanics and other crew members required to get a car into the starting field.

Last year's winner, Mark Donohue, took away nearly a quarter of a million dollars for his victory. And just making the race — even if the car gets no further than the starting line — is worth about $15,000.

Paradoxically, the field's fastest qualifier has won the race only twice in the past 15 years. But eight of the past 15 winners started the race on the three-car front row, and every winner but one since 1958 was among the first seven starters.

While the nation's second largest spectator sport provides both training and proving grounds for a company's product, it also puts the name of the product squarely before the public, a fact of life that annually brings scores of businesses into racing. Today's racing victory can be tomorrow's sales bonanza.

There may be some question of whether the prune company sponsoring one of the Indy cars can expect any product innovation as a result.

But then, the world's largest, oldest and richest auto race holds something for everyone.

Junior Olympics Conduct Meet

The qualifying meet for the Junior Olympics, sponsored by the Lincoln Jaycees, was held at the East High Stadium Saturday with more than 500 boys and girls participating.

USC Topples Loyola

By Associated Press

Southern California took a step towards earning a berth in the College World Series in Omaha by downing Loyola, 9-8, in an NCAA District 8 baseball playoff game Saturday afternoon.

The Trojans, who have won an unprecedented three straight CWS titles advanced to 43-11 on the season. They meet the Lions (30-23) again Sunday afternoon in the best-of-three playoff.

The USC-Loyola winner meets Los Angeles State for the District 8 championship.

In District 1, Harvard and Providence gained the finals in a tripleheader at Boston's Fenway Park.

Harvard, which defeated Northeastern, 11-1, needs only one victory to represent New Englnad in Omaha. If Providence, which topped Massachusetts, 8-7 and outsed Northeastern, 5-4, defeats Harvard, it would neccesitate a second game since Providence has already lost one game.

Elsewhere, Pan American eliminated Arkansas, 4-2, from the District 6 playoffs in a four-hour marathon.

Pan American will now meet the winner of a late Saturday night game between Texas-Trinity, at 1 p.m. Sunday at Arlington, Tex.

At Starkville, Miss., Appalachian State nipped North Carolina State, 4-3, in 10 innings in a District 3 game.

The loss eliminated NC State, the Atlantic Coast Conference champion, which lost earlier Saturday to Vanderbilt, 4-2, in 13 innings.

Pepitone Set For Japan?

ST LOUIS (UPI) — Joe Pepitone, the much-traveled controversial first basemen said Saturday night he is retiring from baseball—again. He said he may go to Japan.

Pepitone, who "retired" last May 1st but came back on June 30th and finished the season with the Chicago Cubs, made his newest decision after being traded from the Cubs to the Atlanta Braves. He has played only three games with the Braves.

Pepitone hasn't yet filed his letter to the commissioner officially retiring (he did that last year and had to sit out for two months according to the rules) but a Braves' spokesman said the letter was being prepared.

Smith French Winner

PARIS (UPI) — Top seeded Stan Smith Saturday led eight other Americans safely through to the third round of the men's singles in the $150,000 French Open tennis championships.

Smith recovered from his customary slow start to defeat Californian Jim McManus of Berkeley, 7-5, 7-5.

Also making it safely through the second round were Arthur Ashe, Tom Gorman, Dick Stockton, Erik Van Dillen, Harold Solomon, Frank Froehling, Charlie Pasarell and Paul Gerken.

Meantime, Bjorn Borg, Sweden's 16-year-old Davis Cup player, continued to be a giant-killer, defeating his second top professional in two days.

Borg, who Friday shredded ninth-seeded American Cliff Richey in straight sets, Saturday fought back from a 1-4 deficit in the final set to beat Frenchman Pierre Barthes 3-6, 6-1, 8-6 and be cheered off the sweltering center court of Roland Garros by over 8,000 spectators.

Second seed Ilie Nastase of Romania became the first player to reach the last 16 with a 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 third round win against West Germany's Juergen Fassbender.

Two more seeds, Manuel Orantes of Spain and Britain's Mark Cox, crashed out leaving only eight of the original 16 seeds still playing on the fourth day of the tourney.

Former Lincolnite Herm Rohrig, now supervisor of officials for the Big Ten Conference, has been named to supervise a new concept in sports schooling.

Rohrig will supervise a school for football and basketball officials at St. John's Military Academy in Delafield, Wis., July 12-15 as a pilot program for what could become an expanded program.

Rohrig says he feels such schools are sorely needed by the men, who officiate football and basketball. "To become a great athlete requires many hours of specialized training," he points out. "This type of training should also be true for officials, who too often are trained on a catch as catch can basis."

Golfers Can Help Charities

The thousands of golfers, who will be filling Nebraska courses this Memorial Day Weekend, have an opportunity to join golfers from across the country in contributing to various charities.

National Golf Day, actually it runs for 16 days, has long been a project of the Professional Golfers Association to raise money for various charities.

Any golfer may enter the competition for a donation of $1 or more and, using his or her handicap, attempt to beat PGA champion Gary Player, U.S. Open king Jack Nicklaus, Ladies PGA champion Kathy Ahern and USGA Women's Open Champion Susie Berning.

That quartet will play 18 holes Tuesday at the Canterbury Golf Club in Cleveland with Player or Nicklaus setting the target score for the men and Ahern or Berning doing likewise for the gals.

Any amateur beating that target score will receive a prize indicating that they beat the champions.

In observance of the event, Nebraska Gov. J. J. Exon has proclaimed Tuesday as National Golf Day in Nebraska.

Ties Nicklaus, Can't Beat Amateurs

Nebraska golf professional Merle Backlund of Aurora, a former Nebraska PGA champion, lamenting the fact that the top Nebraska amateurs defeated the top pros Friday at the Lincoln Country Club in the second annual Nebraska Cup matches, observed:

"I've played an exhibition with Jack Nicklaus and I tied him. I lost to Lee Trevino by only two strokes. But I've teed it up in four matches now with amateurs and I'm still looking for my first win."

For the next two Monday nights, "The Baseball World of Joe Garagiola," preceding NBC-TV's Monday Night Baseball will feature the Kansas City Royals and new manager Jack McKeon, the former Omaha Royals skipper. Air time is 7 p.m.

The St. Louis Cardinals Lou Brock was kicked out of a ball game for the first time recently for allegedly kicking dirt on the plate.

That alone didn't get him the thumb, but when umpire Andy Olsen asked, "What's the idea of covering the plate?" and Brock replied, "Because you can't see it, anyway," that did end his playing time for the night.

New Iowa State football coach Earle Bruce introduced a couple of changes in the Cyclones alignment this spring, one on offense and one on defense.

Fans and opponents this fall will see the Cyclones using the Houston Veer offense, combined with the basic I formation and a new defensive wrinkle which Bruce calls, "The Bubble," a seven-man front with a four-deep secondary for pass coverage.

Texas Rangers' traveling secretary Burt Hawks on the plight of the talent-shy Rangers says, "Our best hope is that we've traded so many players away that we've weakened the rest of the league."

Quotable quote from former Oklahoma football coach Chuck Fairbanks, "They remember Wilber and Orville Wright, but nobody remembers who was second."

Nicklaus Widens Margin

ATLANTA (UPI) — Jack Nicklaus continued his torrid Atlanta Golf Classic play Saturday, turning in his third straight super round to go 17 under par and widen his lead over runnerup Tom Weiskopf to a commanding six strokes.

Nicklaus had a 6-under-par 66 Saturday for a 54-hole total of 199, just one stroke higher than the tour low for 1973.

Weiskopf, a schoolmate of Nicklaus at Ohio State in the early '60s, went into Saturday's round insisting that Nicklaus "can be beaten," but lost ground with his 68-205. Al Geiberger took over third with a 68-207.

"The rest of us are playing for second place money now," said Gay Brewer, who displayed sensational iron play Saturday to post a seven-under-par 65 for an eight-under-par 208 that enabled him to climb over 20 golfers who were ahead of him at the start of the round.

Nicklaus, gunning for his fourth victory of the year in just 10 tournament appearances, began the day at 11 under, four strokes ahead of Weiskopf, after opening rounds of 67-66. He tore up the front nine of the hilly Atlanta Country Club course with a five-birdie 31, then coasted home, apparently confident that he had this tournament well under control.

Winner of $146,000 so far this year, Nicklaus needs the Classic's $30,000 first prize to vault past absent Bruce Crampton back into the top spot on this year's PGA money list.

"It does give you a sort of helpless feeling when you look up at the board and see Jack going from 11, to 12, to 13—and on and on," said Geiberger. "You like to think that he is only human but he certainly has played some very unordinary golf here this week."

Weiskopf refused to concede.

"If I shoot a 64 Sunday and Jack shoots a 72..." he mused, "it's not impossible. I've shot 64 before and Jack's shot 72.

"However," Weiskopf admitted, "the way Jack is playing this week, he's not likely to shoot a 72. He hasn't made many mistakes out there, not many at all."

Hubert Green had a 69 to tie Brewer at 208 while Rod Funseth, with a 69, had a 210. Another stroke back at five-under 211 were Orville Moody (71), Johnny Miller (70), Bob Shaw (70), John Schlee (69) and Tom Kite (71).

Dave Hill, winner last week at Memphis, was in at 212 along with J.C. Snead, Don Iverson, Bert Green and Lou Graham as 28 of the players in the Classic field were under par for 54 holes.

South Africa's Gary Player, making this year's U.S. debut here after being delayed on his return to the States by an operation, continued to improve Saturday as a 69 got him to even par 216.

Lincoln High, Southeast Pace All-City Selections

By Randy York
Prep Sports Writer

Lincoln High, led by gold medalists Mike Fultz and Rex Davies and its record-breaking 2-mile relay team, dominates the 1973 Sunday Journal and Star All-City track selections.

Southeast, however, edged Northeast for the most all-city baseball selections. And the Knights claimed three of the six all-city golf spots.

Fultz, the Journal and Star's 1973 prep Athlete of the Year, had a season best of 59-4 in the shot put and set a state record of 58-8¼ in the event last weekend at Omaha Burke.

REGIONAL

Teammate Davies, who also landed all-city berths in the triple jump and pole vault, was the long jump gold medalist with a 23-10 at state. It was the fourth best jump in Nebraska prep track history.

The state runnerup Links also set a 2-mile relay state record with Jerry Wolford, Jerry Kletchka, Adam Loos and Mick Damian combining for an 8:04.1. Jay Ashcraft and Dasn Oberheu, who teamed with Wolford and Damian for the Trans-Nebraska 2-mile relay title, also earned all-city status.

Although he finished third in the state finals on a windy day, Lincoln High's Charles Baldwin was among top track achievers.

The city, Trans-Nebraska and district champion Baldwin was a model of consistency and hit a season high of 177-10½ in the conference meet. It ranks fourth on the all-time discus charts.

Four athletes repeated on the 15-man all-city baseball team. They are Southeast outfielder Paul Haas, Lincoln High catcher Paul Grosscup, Southeast pitcher Jim Thompson and Northeast pitcher Gary Sampson, who lost a heart-breaking 2-1 decision to Omaha South in the state finals.

Haas, the city's leading hitter with a .396 average, "has the best arm of any outfielder I've ever had," according to Southeast baseball coach Charlie Gordon.

The Knights, who went 5-0 in the city race, landed six all-city berths. District champion and state runnerup Northeast had five.

Lincoln High's Grosscup, son of Links' coach Buford Grosscup, finished his three-year varsity career with a .355 batting average and struck out only five times in 100 at bats.

He was the only Links' player selected in baseball although first baseman Ron Galusha was also considered. East catcher Dave Roseland and Northeast outfielder Chuck Biggs also merited recognition.

East's Joe Livingston and Northeast's Scott Votava drew heaviest support among infielders and Southeast's Haas and Steve Johnson rated top outfielder support.

Lincoln High's Steve Harris, runnerup medalist in the state Class A championships at Fremont last weekend, led the golf selections. Teammate Doug Smith, who finished ninth, also earned a spot.

Rennie Sasse, another top 10 finisher, led city, Trans-Nebraska and district champion Southeast's three-man representation. District medalist Clint Dudley and Rick Reynolds, a repeat all-city choice, were other Knights named.

A fourth Southeast golfer, Steve Statton, just missed an all-city berth. He and East's Mark Rogers were foremost challengers for such status.

City championm Tom Westover of Northeast was another repeat all-city golf selection.

Belleville Expecting Fast Pace

Belleville, Kan. — Another record setting opening session for sprint cars is expected at the Memorial weekend classic Sunday on Belleville's world's fastest one-half mile dirt track.

The sprint cars of the Big Car Racing Association nearly rewrote the Belleville record books last year breaking previous records for 4, 8 and 20 laps.

Excellent races are again expected, as the world's fastest half-mile has been soaked this spring just like the entire area. The moisture depth will put the track in fast condition with some final finishing touches.

The $3,000 purse this year is also expected to increase interest from the Midwest's best drivers.

Time trials are to begin at 1 p.m. and races at 2 p.m.

Two members of the school's coaching staff found Peters about 11 a.m. They said he had talked to his wife about an hour earlier.

Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Determined Fultz Set For NU

Fultz, however, credits most of his success to his mother, "who taught me to work hard for everything and treat everyone fairly whether they're black, white, yellow or green."

It wasn't always easy. When Fultz was a junior, three blacks quit the Links' basketball team. Fultz was urged to join them There was pressure, a lot of it Fultz responded admirably and kept to his philosophy to never quit.

"There are those who always take the other route," says Fultz. "They laugh at you when you make a mistake and whisper behind your back They want you to screw up

"I've been called a Tom before. And it hurts," he adds. "But I just look at those people and tell them they don't know what it's all about."

It's difficult for a lot of people to understand how Fultz, being such a massive physical specimen, can ever lose out in athletics

"I was in a store just the other day." Fultz related last week, "and some guy came up to me and said: 'If I had your size, I'd be an all-American ' "

"It gives me a slight edge," concedes Fultz, "but it isn't everything You still have to know where to be and how to get there. I may be fortunate to be big, but I still have to go full speed with all the desire I have.

"Some people have told me I'm too nice, not mean enough," relates Fultz, who says: "I am like that off the field in letting people get away with things others wouldn't let them dream of."

But Fultz prefers his humble stance and considers himself "almost a mirror image" of Nebraska all-American Rich Glover, who has helped Fultz mentally prepare for Nebraska football while student teaching at Lincoln High this last semester.

"He sort of took me under his wing," Fultz says of Glover "I like him because he's quiet. He doesn't have to go around and tell people he's good They know he is

"We think about the same," adds Fultz, well known by his teammates and classmates as an exceptionally humble and kind person

"I don't know why I am," he says in response to a question, tracing his attitudes to his mother's influence.

"She forced me to go to St John's Baptist church and I can't ever thank her enough for it," says Fultz

"If my mother doesn't like what I do she comes out and says it And I've found out it's amazing the way things always turn out her way all the time even though I can't understand at the time "

Fultz practices introspection, getting at a distance to take a closer look at himself.

"I like to sit in the crowd and watch and wonder why people do some things to attract attention," he says. "I can't understand why people cut up or show off to show how tough they are.

A little success seems to do some strange things to some people, adds Fultz "They put themselves on a higher level and forget about the common people

"There's no way I'll ever feel above the crowd because I've been down there before and know what it's like," says Fultz "You should be able to communicate with all your teammates whether they're varsity, reserves, sophomores or freshmen

Fultz who grew up in a small home with brothers Herb and Larry, attended Whittier Junior High School and dedicated himself there "to get good grades so I could get a scholarship "

At Lincoln High, Mike has been a 3 0 (B average) student

"When I was a sophomore, I told myself that I would never sit out a year of college because my grades aren't good enough," says Fultz. "That would be embarrassing and defeat your whole purpose."

Fultz, who went both ways in football last fall as fullback and linebacker, may be tried as a tight end or tackle at Nebraska He has 04 7 speed in the 40-yard dash despite his bulky muscular frame

"I don't know how big a weight program will pump me up," says Fultz, who has been a religious weight lifter the last two years en route to shot put stardom

"Everyone wants to be a hero right away and not work for it," says Fultz, who realizes "disappointments are always going to come in anything you do. You should expect it and work harder to overcome them.

"I was worried last football season," recalls Fultz, whose team experienced only one win. "The other team really keyed onme. I'd get to the line and boom, be hit by three or four people.

"But I kept trying that much harder because I knew everything was on the line," says Fultz. "Life can get awful tough in different conditions.

"I'm ready to go in there this fall and do my thing I'm anxious to be punishing on the field," adds Fultz. "I want to show what I have."

The Lincoln High standout believes he's been a product of a city which breeds excellent competition.

"I really respect playing football against Joe Collura, Bruce Maske and Reg Gast and basketball against Terry Novak," says Fultz. "You can't give any of them one inch. That's what separates them from the average dudes."

Fultz admits "I'm not that good of a basketball player," but he did achieve second team all-city status and helped the Links upset state champion Northeast and No. 2-rated East.

"During basketball season," recalls Fultz, "sometimes I would be laying on the couch, dreaming and reach for the ball and never get it. I had trouble relaxing."

To set the state shot put record, Fultz forced himself to relax. "I had to reach sort of a cold fury. I had to reach inside myself and yet still relax."

Having had to be a positive morale factor as well as a leader in all three sports in which he competes, Fultz has become more of a man.

The physically-powerful athlete shows respect for all coaches and responds well to authority. Lincoln High principal Bill Pfeiff says Fultz "has probably been pretty lonely at times, catching heck from both sides. But he's stable and solid and stands for what he thinks is fair

"It's a pleasure to see such a positive and modest young athlete," adds Pfeiff. "There's not a lot like him He's managed to avoid a lot of pitfalls many would fall into I think he showed his basic character in responding to adversity last football season "

Fultz is hoping to demonstrate the same type of determination at Nebraska

"One day Rich Glover told me he woke up at football practive as a freshman and started whuppin' people after getting knocked around himself," relates Fultz.

Despite being the original Mr. Nice Guy, Fultz has never been knocked around Furthermore, he never plans to start

Swim Club Swim-a-thon

The Lincoln Swim Club is conducting a Swim-a-thon on June 2 to support their own club, the International Swimming Hall of Fame, and the Foreign Travel Fund.

Being organized on a national basis, the Swim-a-thons consist of children (and adults) swimming as far as they can with sponsors putting up a certain amount of money for every 25 yard pool length the participant travels.

Les Buckley missed out this spring The Lincoln Southeast shortstop didn't achieve all-city baseball status. A severely sprained ankle, which put him on crutches early in the season, diminished those chances.

Les Buckley

But Les Buckley, the athlete, probably isn't the type to sulk over such a trivial honor.

Not becuase he was an all-city defensive back in football last fall. And not because he was a member of Southeast's varsity basketball team.

Buckley would not sulk because he's got more going for him as a scholar than an athlete. Later this week, he will graduate No. 1 in a Southeast senior calss of 477 with a 1.0 average — straight A's.

If there was such an honor as captain of an all-scholastic high school athletic group, Les Buckley would be our choice. Who could be more deserving?

Moving on to a little bit about a lot of things:

For Alma, 22 Years Too Late

Eugene (Hoppy) McCue, the first Lincoln Sunday Journal and Star High School Athlete of the Year in 1951, last week was named superintendent of the Alma public schools.

The former Arapahoe multi-sport standout led his track team to the 1951 state track grand championship. The feat has never been accomplished by another Class C school in boys track.

"Welcome to Alma, Hoppy! It's good to have you on our side for a change," wrote Dick Brown in the Harlan County Journal.

Brown's remarks were prompted by a "personal recollection of Hoppy in football, especially one game in which he scored five touchdowns — on runs ranging from 30 to 60 yards — as Arapahoe thumped Alma, 32-0."

Former Lincoln Pius X wrestling coach Charles Rush has been named athletic director at Omaha Ryan. He replaces Joe Ponseigo, the coach whose unbeaten football team last fall had to forfeit nine games for using an ineligible player.

The 14th annual Golden West Rack Meet at Sacramento, Calif., is the classiest event for a high school graduating senior, who must meet the following "minimum" qualifying standards:

100 — :09.6; 220 — :21.5; 440 — :47.9; 880 — 1:53.0; mile — 4:12; 2-mile — 9:06; 120 high hurdles — :14.0; 180 low hurdles — :18.8; long jump — 24-0; high jump — 6-9; pole vault — 15-0; triple jump — 47-6; shot put — 62-0; discus — 180-0.

No Nebraska seniors meet those qualifying standards, not even state half-mile record-holder Barney Hill.

First Plucknett, Now Hill

Losing Boys Town's Hill to Kansas State caused Greg Fokerts of Lincoln to wonder "what Frank Sevigne is doing as a recruiter?"

Folkerts says "it's tough to criticize the coach of the Big Eight indoor champions, especially in light of his recent Eastern recruits with good credentials."

"But losing Hill," the letter writer points out, "marks the second straight year our university coach has lost the top Nebraska high school track athlete to a Big Eight school. Last year, he wanted nothing to do with Beatrice's Ben Plucknett, who just happened to win the Big Eight discus title as a freshman."

The top performance in last weekend's Colorado state high school track meet was a 51-¼ triple jump by Harrison's Victor White, who also high jumped 6-6.

Colorado had impressive state meet winners of :14.0 in the high hurdles, 1:27.4 in the 880 relay, :48.5 in the quarter, :19 3 in the low hurdles, 1:54.2 in the 880, 60-6 in the shot put, :21.4 in the 220, 9:18.8 in the 2-mile and 3:20.5 in the mile relay

Missouri's top performance was a 7.54.7 two-mile relay by Lindbergh High School.

Merger Asked

Both Mayor Sam Schwartzkopf and Lancaster County Board Chairman Robert Colin Sr. showed favorable reaction to a recommendation calling for consolidation of city and county governments within 10 years

The recommendation was part of a $45,000 report by the San Francisco consulting firm of Arthur D Little Inc., hired by the Lincoln Foundation to study city-county government

The firm reported that while consolidation is feasible and desirable it should not be done until county government is strengthened, particularly in the areas of personnel management, purchasing practices, budgeting systems and administrative leadership.

Exon Beaten to the Punch?

Senators Propose 1973 Tax Cut

Sen. Jerome Warner's third try at engineering a tax reduction Thursday bore the first buds of success.

The Legislature gave first round approval to Warner's LB10 — a proposal to cut the state's individual income tax rate from 15% to 13%, retroactive to New Year's Day, and a coincident scaling back of the corporate tax rate from 3.75% to 3.25%.

Should LB10 be enacted into law on June 1, the last day of the 1973 session, Gov. J. J. Exon would have unchallengeable power to approve or veto the 1973 tax cut.

A tax cut this year, however, could be expected to wreak havoc with Exon's plans for a 10% income tax cut in 1974, an election year.

The political problem passage of LB10 would pose for the governor seemed to delight a number of senators. They indicated that, in large measure, he brought the situation on himself when he strode into the Chamber April 16 and reported a multi-million dollar jump in tax collections would permit a 1974 tax cut if senators were prudent about appropriations.

Warner showed senators figures indicating that the existing overcollection of tax revenue ran safely accommodate an income tax reduction of approximately $12-$13 million this year.

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Friday's Game Commission meeting brought up a point of interest which may be a money-maker the Game and Parks people are letting slide by.

Permission was granted for private concessions outlets to bid for leases on Branched Oak, Pawnee and Louisville State Recreation Area lakes. A debate followed which brings the above point to light.

Parks chief Dale Bree and members of the seven-man commission board discussed means for providing the public with the class A concessionaire facilities the state feels the public merits.

At the present time, leases are given private bidders who make claims for their concession facilities and services. The concessionaire who most impresses the state planners gets the lease

In turn, the concessionaire has to meet state requirements or guidelines. The cost of the leased state lands is then two per cent of the gross income of the concession.

Controls Not Always Met

According to Bree and a few of the commissioners, it was revealed some of the concessionaires were not able to live up to promises. A discontinuation clause in the contract can close such facilities

Bree indicated a serious need for a top quality facility at Lake McConaughy where five leases were granted in early years of that impoundment. Five leases and no class A facility.

Other areas of the state suffer the similar consequences of subpar facilities, but they remain in operation.

Now here's the suggested approach from this corner. If the state has not been satisfied with a few of the concession operations, if it wishes it had more control over the facility and its operation, if it wanted to provide the public with the best possible concessions operation for boating, snacks, bait and the like, why not operate the facilities themselves.

Many surrounding states do just that. They operate their own facilities. Then they don't have anyone to blame but themselves when such an operation isn't quite up to snuff.

Iowa seems to be doing pretty well with its operation. Of course, the state would be required to put out funds for the original buildings, supplies and personnel. But quality products would be the end result.

Many of the Iowa concessionaire stands are combination toilet and shower facilities. Several supervise swimming areas. Combinations are common for multi-purpose facilities as these could and should be for economy's sake.

Responsibility Lies With State

As Bree said to the commission Friday, "We have the responsibility to ensure these facilities are properly built, properly maintained, and have the impact on environment with the least possible effect.

"We are not only concerned with the money we make, we're concerned with the service provided to the public as we are responsible for this," Bree concluded.

Since the state is responsible anyway, why not take control The difference between two per cent take on the gross sales and 100 per cent for the summer-long operation should be able to pay for the parttime help needed to operate the facilities.

Bulk purchases by the state would considerably cut the original cost of obtaining boats, motors, bait tanks and other such essentials Likewise, baits and food stuffs should come at a savings with bulk buying.

The service provided by the state would be highly supervised and standards could be set and maintained throughout the years. No need to worry about sloppy concessions or anywhere less than class A.

The facility would be on state land, it would have to meet state standards, it provides a service for the people of the state and users of state land and water recreational resources.

The state Game and Parks Commission should take a long, hard look at accepting ALL the responsibility on its own. It might even provide some funding for other maintenance and capital improvement programs which are in desperate need.

Victoria Springs' muskrats aren't too harrassed by human visitation as evidenced at left swimming in the State Recreation Area's pond. The park's shelter, foot bridge across a slow-moving brook, and plenty of trees (right) are plus factors in any campers' book.

Victoria Springs Offers Camping Quiet

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Anselmo — It's a get-away world with no place to go.

People are on the move. They search for a little out-of-the-way place to pitch a tent or park a camper. A quiet, scenic place, yet it can be easily reached.

Not many spots fill the bill. They are hard to find when they do. Once located, nobody wants to spill the news so spacious quarters might be saved for themselves.

But once in a while news slips out. That quiet little beauty spot is discovered. Such a place is Victoria Springs, eight miles east of here off highway 2 and 302.

The state recreation area isn't large. It doesn't attract droves of people. It can't handle very large crowds. It is out of the way. It is quiet. It is scenic.

As do many of the state parks and recreation areas, Victoria Springs has its historical values, also. It was settled by a young Virginian in the early 1870's.

He and fellow settlers found the springs in the area to have mineral values. They set out to expand on the resource, building a large bath house, bottling and selling the waters, making ale, pop, champagne and cider.

OUTDOOR NEWS

In 1922, the people of Anselmo, Broken Bow (21 miles to the south) and New Helena purchased the 70 acres of land and presented it to the state for a park in 1925.

A small stream trickles through the area with a good tree covering. A fishing pond and boating are within an easy cast of the camp grounds. A ball field and cooking grills are available for outdoor recreation.

A family of muskrats will also provide entertainment on the south end of the pond if approached with care.

John Schulenberg and his wife Winifred have taken care of this area, plus Pressey Special Use Area and Arnold Lake Recreation Area nearby, since 1961.

With Winifred holding down the office chores, John is able to take a great deal of time and pride in care-taking for the remaining grounds. It shows.

Victoria Springs, like the other two areas under his supervision, are immaculate. No litter. No tree limbs and debris. The area is wellmowed and trimmed. Restrooms are clean, although they are the primitive pit variety.

John and his summertime assistant patrol the area regularly to ensure no irregularities occur. This might be bothersome, but security in camping areas has become nearly as important as camping itself.

John was formerly an assistant at Ponca State Park prior to his move westward. He's surely found a home at Victoria Springs.

A pair of cabins are available for those interested. An adequate, but not infinite amount of camping space is available. Water, but no electricity, is available. A dumping station is at hand for camper units.

If you're looking for a spot to stop, break out the beer, have a party and enjoy some loud music with your neighbors — don't stop at Victoria Springs. You won't like the atmosphere.

If you are looking for a quiet little place to stop on your way West, a spot for a weekend jaunt to enjoy a shaded barbeque, a scenic brook, a small pond, peaceful resting stop — plan on staying at Victoria Springs. It's your kind of place.

"I shoot an 1820 Hawken replica," he said, explaining his dress patterns. "I went with the period The gun was built for the mountain men, the beaver trappers. I kind of wanted to stay on the mountain man line."

The beard and shaggy look come with the image, also. Trimble indicated he'd never seen a picture of a mountain man without "hair on his face" so the beard is essential.

Both Trimble and Franks had encouragement and leadership from staunch supporters and veterans of the muzzle loading movement — Hedges for Franks and Dr. Wendel Fairbanks of Auburn for Trimble.

Fairbanks takes charge of an authentic civil war cannon, owned by Brownville. The cannon, and one brought from North Platte by Bill Stancey, kept viewers and participants on their toes periodically during Saturday's shooting.

Both are in firing condition. The practice exhibition rounds echo across the hills of the small Missouri River town.

Fairbanks made a believer of many a flintlock shooter, but his influence on Trimble is evident.

"He once told me you couldn't shoot a flintlock without hair on your face," Trimble grinned. "He made a believer out of me on this authenticity thing."

Hedges is another of the authenticity backers. As one of the foremost coordinating members for the Brownville festivities, he appears in old time gambler get-ups.

Hedges also secretly indicated it is his belief the South will rise again. If so, at least his muzzle loading corps will have trained eyes, thanks to practice in competition.

But the competition is not the jest of muzzle loading shooting, according to Franks.

"Shooting a flintlock is difficult to put into words," he said. "The excitement lies with the flash when you fire. And the realization when hunting of knowing you only have one shot.

"Pulling the trigger is minor. You have to will a flintlock to go off. There's really nothing like it."

Picky Shooting

The one-at-a-time rule is particularly applicable to quail. Bob White comes out of cover like gangbusters, a dozen birds scrambling in all directions. Choose one. Drop him, and only then switch to another. Losers aim at "the covey" and blow holes in empty air.

Practice Casting

An easily carried, jointed bait casting rod makes sense when you hunt ducks and lack a good retriever Using a treble hooked plug, you can simply cast out there, snag your kill — and reel it in!

Poison Ivy Poses Outdoor Problems

Poison ivy is a hazard that stalks fans of nearly all forms of outdoor recreation, including fishing, hunting, hiking, camping, picnicking, photography, and nature study.

Although nearly everyone is exposed to it at one time or another, many people cannot recognize it. However, being able to spot a poison ivy plant can save considerable agony and keep an outing from an unpleasant and untimely conclusion.

The only dependable characteristic of the poison ivy plant is that it produces three leaflets on each stalk.

Leaves can vary in size, shape and color, and the plant can be only a little shrub or it can grow into a 75-foot vine reaching into the tops of trees or covering a stone wall.

Another means of identifying the plant is its kinky, brown, aerial rootlets which cover the vines and attach themselves to crevices in rocks or small openings in the tree bark. The rootlets make the vine look like fuzzy rope.

Clusters of small, five-petaled flowers appear on the ivy in late summer, but don't be tempted to pick the yellowish-green blossoms or the resulting green berries which ripen into an ivory color. Autumn turns the glossy leaves yellow, red and orange.

Poison ivy's toxic ingredient is an oily substance called urushol which occurs in the sap and is found in all parts of the plant. Urushiol packs an itchy wallop any time of the year and lingers on even when the plant is dead. Ivy branches cut and left outdoors on a garage roof for 18 months were found still to be dangerous.
months were found still to be dangerous.

Urushiol can be transferred to the skin byhandling tools or camping equipment which has come in contact with poison ivy. Even petting the family dog after it has romped in ivy-infested woods can transmit the oily toxin and cause infection.

Oil droplets in the smoke of burning ivy can penetrate light clothing and irritate exposed parts of the body.

Exposure to poison ivy calls for a thorough scrubbing with heavy-duty soap several times during the first half-hour after contact. Clothes worn in the woods should be washed before being worn again.

Calamine lotion will help ease the itching in mild cases of poison ivy infection but severe blistering must be treated by a doctor.

Motor Carriers Said Facing Fuel Runout

By Associated Press

The president of the Nebraska Motor Carriers Assn. says motor carriers throughout Nebraska are finding themselves within hours of being totally out of fuel

Robert P. Mahoney said some "immediate jawboning of the petroleum industry" will be needed if the state and nation are to avert "a potential disaster."

He said voluntary guidelines established by the Interior Dept's office of oil and gas for the allocation of crude oil and refinery products have been an "utter failure."

The Case for Silver

How to protect your assets against INFLATION

Inflation has already slashed away nearly 2/3 of the dollar's 1940 purchasing power William McChesney Martin Jr, former Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, warns: "We have engaged in fiscal stimulus which is so far in excess of any reasonable requirement that it borders on the irresponsible"

Dr. Franz Pick, world-famous monetary authority, warns: "The U.S. dollar ... has now entered the stage of terminal disease," and that bankruptcy is "inevitable."

And Harry Browne, whose book HOW YOU CAN PROFIT FROM THE COMING DEVALUATION accurately predicted the first dollar devaluation in 37 years, and the record gold prices, warns "The alternatives are narrowed to either runaway inflation or a full-scale depression"

Your Inflation Defense

You are NOT helpless in the face of onrushing monetary disaster. While inflation and recurring monetary crises are destroying the assets of less knowledgeable investors, you can secure your life savings. Even during depressions, a few farsighted investors manage to prosper And you could be among the prosperous few. Our new booklet, The Case for Silver—How to Protect Your Assets Against Inflation, by Louis E. Carabini, President of the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange, will show you:

- Why silver is a valued hedge against inflation—proven effective for nearly 2,600 years
- 3 powerful forces at work today which are speeding America towards further monetary crises
- Why the peculiar nature of the supply and demand for silver makes sharp gains for silver seem inevitable—regardless of monetary crises.
- 2 common mistakes in silver investing—and how you can easily avoid them.
- How a new silver investment—the Pacific Coast Coin Exchange Protected Margin Account in silver coins—can protect your assets against inflation.
- How to open your Pacific Coast Coin Exchange Protected Margin Account.

Rock Musical A Real Story, Labor of Love

By Holly Spence

A stage show by the name of Carousel for Freaks has become a labor of love

Director-producer Mike Dobbins says this rock opera is "an immature type of thing, but he finds its unique in that it ' deals with situations not dealt with before "

The independently produced show goes on stage at the Lincoln Community Playhouse at 8 p m Friday It runs Saturday and next Sunday and June 8-9 also

This labor of love is the life story of composer and lead role holder Danny Meldon of Lincoln A former University of Nebraska student, Meldon has been involved in the music scene for many years

Dobbins said that the rock opera deals with Meldon's growing up with drugs and finding them to be unnecessary. It is a miniscule reflection of the Haight-Ashbury days.

The director said that Meldon has talked about this project for years, but just finally got it off the ground Meldon wrote the music, but needed help in orchestrating the entire production

Dobbins said that some of the finest musicians in Nebraska have been put together to furnish the soundtrack These include Victor Lewis, Rod Molden, Jeff Johnson, Bruce McCracken, Steve Rall, Rex Shrout, Jerry Boster, John Gonzalez, Gary Vajgrt and Tom Larson

Dobbins said that everyone is involved because of faith in Meldon's talent

"We all came to an agreement to do it for more than money," said Dobbins, who feels that the show holds potential for a national tour.

After playing Lincoln, the company will move to the Omaha Playhouse for two weekends Plans are then to move to Des Moines, Iowa, and Kansas City

All cast members involved are professional singers or dancers and/or university students These include Carol Rogers, Jerry Cook, Al McCracken, Lynn Lockwood, Paul Burner, Julie Vogt, Carol Svoboda, Debbie Wilkinson, Lynn Finney, Jerry Davidson, Trudy Knicely, Marty Terry, Kay Strand and Susan Meldon

"I always felt there was as much talent here as on the coasts," said Dobbins, who added that the company hopes to cut and distribute an original soundtrack recording of the show "The plot is simple enough and the music hip enough that I think it's got the potential," Dobbins says

Although this vehicle is not uncommon to the opera score, this one hour, 45 minute production is made up strictly of rock music.

Dialogue is minimal, Dobbins said, chuckling that Carousel for Freaks would be a "painful experience if you don't like rock music "

Dobbins noted that those between 16 and 23 years of age should be particularly interested in this original rock opera

"And I am excited about the facility (Community Playhouse) because it will provide the intimate experience with rock music," said Dobbins

He added that he is happy that those outside of the Playhouse can now use the facility

"It is becoming what a community theater should be," he said

Four Musical Films Returning

In the light that four musicals — Funny Girl, Camelot, Fiddler on the Roof and Oliver — are finding their way back to Lincoln motion picture screens, some comments might be appropriate

Whether it be the fact there that a great number of screens are available in Lincoln or that there is a lack of current film fare, the successful musical finds its way back into the movie theaters with some regularity.

And of all the types of motion pictures, musicals seem to draw the most criticism. Having a undying love for musical theater or the musical motion picture often puts one into a particular class of theater-goer. Some people look on lovers of the musical theater as a freakish lot.

One of the loudest accusations is that musical theater, especially the musical film, is unnatural because the actors and actresses are always breaking into song and dance.

But that is where the men are separated from the boys, so to speak.

Good musical theater on film has a number of obstacles to overcome. It must make those breaks into song and dance seem natural.

Reality must be re-created on the screen. Whereas the stage is a three-dimensional medium, the screen is two-dimensional. But film with its two dimensions must be made to look and appear three-dimensional.

Most musicals take a place in time, a locale and spread out around a particular circumstance.

The great number of these filmed musicals subsequently come off as fantasy.

The key is to create a believable tale out of a fantasy story. Filmed reality involves the correct mesh of visual aspects, dialogue, music and dance.

The film must be visually awesome in order to impress. But it must not look like a Hollywood set. The music, lyrics and dances must be fitting and credible enough to make one forget the feeling that there are music, lyrics and dancing.

This is indeed a big order for the producer-director.

But perhaps what is most impressive is a recent film which has captured first place ratings in all the categories of what comprise a good musical — with little criticism from the anti-musical establishment.

While Funny Girl offers the bygone charm of Fanny Brice's dance hall singing, and Camelot tells one of the supreme fairy tales and Oliver brings a Dickensish flavor to the fore, Fiddler on the Roof finds little rebuttal from any corner.

The music appears to be merely part of the sweet and flowing commentary.

Safer Route

Washington (UPI) — If you have a choice of an interstate highway or a less modern road to get where you're going, take the interstate route — it's nearly twice as safe, says Donald S. Knight, director of The Road Information Program

'Only Two Real Classics; Fleming Directed Both'

By Vernon Scott

Hollywood (UPI) — In all the history of motion pictures only two films can be singled out as genuine classics, standing the test of more than 30 years:

Gone With The Wind and The Wizard of Oz.

Arguments may be made for Chaplin's films and other landmark movies, but they cannot be released in theaters or on television and amass fortunes periodically.

The Sound of Music hasn't been around long enough to qualify.

Mervyn Leroy has been around Hollywood for 50 years and produced Wizard of Oz. He also was instrumental in hiring Victor Fleming to direct the film that made a superstar of Judy Garland.

It is a stroke of coincidence — and overdue recognition of magnificent talent — that Fleming also directed Gone With the Wind.

Both films, moreover, were released in 1939.

"George Cukor and Dick Thorpe worked on The Wizard of Oz as directors before we went into production," Leroy recalled.

"George wasn't enjoying the project, and Dick left before we began shooting. I suggested Fleming to Louis B. Mayer, and then all of us at MGM began working on him to do the picture. Finally he agreed.

"None of us, of course, knew the picture would be a smash hit.

"I asked Ed Wynn to play the role of the wizard, and he turned it down because he didn't think the part was big enough. We signed Frank Morgan instead. Wynn later told me how much he regretted his decision."

The Wizard of Oz has earned more than $50 million at theater boxoffices. No one has counted the money it has earned on network television.

"I'd wanted to make the picture since I was a kid," Leroy continued. "The message is very simple — there's no place like home.

"I'll never forget our sneak preview in San Luis Obispo, Calif., where the audience sat in silence for almost a minute at the end of the screening. That can mean the picture is very good or awfully bad. Then they broke into cheers.

"Afterwards six of the MGM executives wanted to cut out Over the Rainbow because they didn't think it was right to have that song included in a barnyard sequence."

LeRoy is an amiable man who smokes large cigars and has as many friends as anyone in Hollywood. He is president of Hollywood Park racetrack.

But first and last he is a motion picture producer-director with 75 movies to his credit, including Mister Roberts, Quo Vadis, Little Ceasar, Anthony Adverse, Thirty Seconds Over Tokyo and Tugboat Annie.

LeRoy often is asked why he doesn't make block-busters anymore. He has a ready reply: "I'm always looking for them.

"But today more importance is attached to a movie budget than to the story. Well, you can't photograph money. And I refuse to make the nude, violent pictures that are being produced today.

"As for the Wizard of Oz, I wish I owned it, but I never did."

Hope Turns 49 (Really 70) Thriving on 28-Hour Days

Ohio-born Bob Hope acknowledges an ovation at Ohio State University football game in Columbus last fall.

By Ron Roach

Hollywood (AP) — Bob Hope grudgingly admits he's pushing 70 but he doesn't act, talk or feel like slowing down.

In fact, the comedian with the ski-jump nose and barrel full of topical wit seriously considers making his Las Vegas stage debut.

He also talks of making quick trips abroad for filming of television specials and, eventually, producing and directing motion pictures.

"I know I'll be 70 but I'm not announcing that," Hope said in an interview at his Toluca Lake home. "I'm going to do Jack Benny's routine, only I'm going to go to 49 and be very large about it."

Hope, whose birthdate is May 29, keeps busy with benefit shows and TV specials. He has two more years to go on his fifth five-year contract with NBC, which calls for a minimum of six specials a year. "We've been averaging eight," he said.

When the contract expires, will he taper off?

"It all depends on how I feel. You know, they make things so attractive, just like this Vegas deal You sit around and say, 'Gee, I don't know. I'd like to get in on that.'

"I like the excitement, and when they come up with the offers they do, I've got to try a little of that." MGM wants Hope to make his Las Vegas debut at the opening of its Grand Hotel there this fall. "They are very charitable-minded, and I think I can help the Eisenhower Medical Center," Hope said

The medical center named after the late former president, in Palm Springs, Calif , is Hope's pet philanthropy.

"In the 35 years since I started making pictures, I've just been too busy. I've never had two or three weeks open," says Hope in explaining why he's never yet played in Las Vegas.

Of Leslie Townes "Bob" Hope, someone said, "If he had to live his life again, he wouldn't have time."

"Yea," agrees Hope. "It's been a little hectic but I lined up the schedule so I can't blame anybody.

"But I've enjoyed it. I've enjoyed every bit of it. I don't suffer from nerves or anything, which is lucky. Otherwise, I couldn't keep that kind of a schedule.

"In fact, I think that schedule has kept me in pretty good shape. When I think of some of my friends who've bought boats and sat around and drank all day — I'm usually on the driving range hitting a few golf balls in Baltimore or Pittsburgh or somewhere.

"I'm keeping moving, keeping my mind occupied."

Hope, since 1964, spent each Christmas in Vietnam entertaining U.S. servicemen. With the end of American troop involvement there, Christmas 1972 was his last such excusion for the USO.

But he's not turning in his passport.

"My next show, I think, will be an international show. We have film from Japan and Korea and Paris, and now I think I might even take a fast trip for about a week and go to Russia and Yugoslavia and maybe London."

He is planning a "Christmas in America" trip which will involve shows at veterans and military hospitals including "Brook General (in San Antonio, Tex.) where they have all the burn cases that people don't know much about."

Through the years, said Hope, he hasn't tried to change the brand of his humor, and he doesn't see any need to alter his style.

"We talk about topical events all the time," he said. "We're talking about the food prices and things that are hot today. As long as you can keep on top of them, I think that's been the success of our show."

Is there anything Hope wants to accomplish?

He joked, "I'd like to invent a 28-hour day so I could get about four more hours of golf in."

"Seriously, I think where I'll go is in producing, producing and directing. I've been around the picture business for so long . . .

"I think there's always room, and I think there will be more room for just good family-oriented pictures. There's got to be."

Hope seemed shocked at some of the four-letter words used even in Academy Award nominee films.

"It's amazing. I remember back in radio when I couldn't say 'jerk.' I've heard Carroll O'Connor say 'bastard,' 'damn' and 'hell.'

The No. 1 part-time resident of Palm Springs, in the desert about 100 miles southeast of Los Angeles, is looking forward to becoming a permanent resident at the place where his annual Desert Classic golf tournament is played as a benefit for the Eisenhower Medical Center.

Construction may take about 18 months to finish the 28,000-square-foot hilltop mansion, a huge concrete-domed structure.

"I have no plan to semiretire, but we might move down there and make it our permanent place.

The $2-million home "is a large joint," said Hope. "But actually I don't think it's any bigger than this place."

The Toluca Lake home is complete with a one-hole golf course.

He said his wife, Dolores, designed the new home "so I could have an audience. We could book the Shrine convention. We may have the Lions and the Christians for the opening . . . nothing like having your own Astrodome, is there?"

It Was 1930 and She Was Reporter for Omaha Bee-News

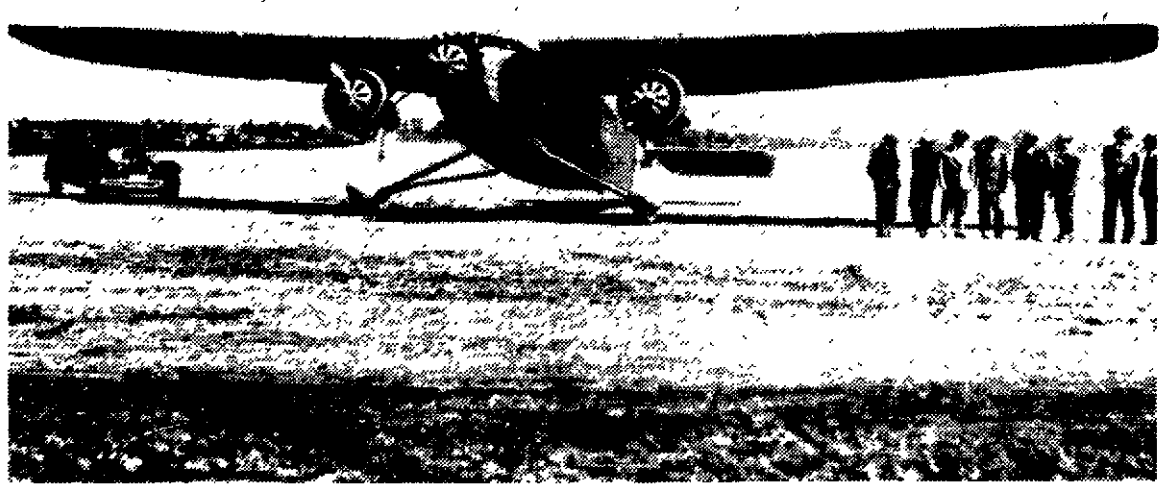
Lincoln Woman Served First Lunch on Plane

By Ruth Godfrey Donovan
Special Writer

The first lunch ever served aboard an airplane in the United States was eaten between Lincoln and Omaha on June 16, 1930 I know because it was my privilege to be served that lunch!

The opportunity to be the first was self-promoted. I was a reporter on the Omaha Bee-News, a Hearst paper later absorbed by the Omaha World-Herald. It was a period when reporters made their own opportunities. If riding an elephant in a circus or being the first female to smoke a cigaret on the city streets would make a good feature story, the reporter persuaded her editor of its worth. I had a lot of persuading to do.

A tiny item in the paper caught my eye. It said that Boeing Air Lines was going to experiment with food service and the first meal would be served at noon between Lincoln and Omaha. I became determined to eat that first lunch!



It was on a plane similar to this on which Ruth Godfrey Donovan was served the first lunch on an airline.

I contacted the Boeing manager in Omaha, a Mr. Peterson, and told him I would write a story for the paper if his airline would provide me with the ride and the lunch. He was enthusiastic and offered to drive me to Lincoln and personally escort me to the airplane.

So far, so good. But I still had to sell the managing editor on the idea and, strange as it sounds today, airplane travel was still adventurous transportation in 1930. When I laid my plan before the managing editor, he scratched his head, rubbed his chin and called in the city editor and the rewrite man. They dismissed me while they discussed the matter. When I was called back they looked at me as though I were an impulsive, brash child. The managing editor asked, "Does your family know that you are planning this stunt?"

Assurances Given

Once again I was dismissed and the conference continued.

After what seemed an endless time, they emerged. Their faces were serious as the managing editor announced they would consent to my taking this foolhardy trip providing I would not hold the paper liable for anything that might happen.

I agreed and as soon as they were out of the room I phoned Mr. Peterson and told him it was all arranged. I would eat that first lunch on Boeing Air Lines.

On the day of the big trip Mr. Peterson picked me up and to my surprise he had a passenger. It was a very disgruntled member of the Omaha staff of the Associated Press — Randall Blake, now a Lincoln resident. The grapevine had been busy and his superiors had heard of my daring and decided the AP could not afford to be scooped by a mere girl reporter.

We drove to the Lincoln airport. A small building served as a station with a windsock waving above it and two airplanes were warming up on the dirt field, the propellers blowing up a cyclone of dust. We had a few anxious moments as Mr. Peterson believed that a plane just about to take off was the one on which the meal would be served He raced down the bumpy runway to catch it but an attendant waved us to a halt and said that the other plane was the one on which we were to ride.

We started for Omaha, 59 miles or 30 minutes away! My story which appeared in the Omaha Bee-News June 21, 1930, tells it as I saw it that day.

"A cup of steaming coffee sipped in the region of the Big Dipper and a dainty chicken sandwich served cloudhigh by a smiling, pretty stewardess. That's quite a far cry from 'Lindy' and his two ham sandwiches flying alone across the Atlantic, but it's being done every day now on the Boeing air transports.

"As the big air diner zoomed from the port at Lincoln, the stewardess informed me that passengers had eaten breakfast at Cheyenne, luncheon was to be served as they soared over the Platte River Valley and dinner would be eaten in Chicago.

"Napkins — hemstitched — and snowy white were produced from some mysterious hiding place and china — with blue and gold borders. The silver came next, which was complete even to timy individual salt and pepper shakers, making the table quite like the average one on terra firma.

"A fruit cocktail from San Francisco, " smiled the stewardess as she served me the first course. I watched dwarfed roundhouses and elevators of Havelock pass from view several hundred feet below as I smacked my lips over this.

"Then bread and butter sandwiches — two kinds — white and dark bread. She who is dieting need not break the rules, thought I, even though she be flying high at noon time

"Which do you prefer?" asked the amiable stewardess at my elbow again as Greenwood was left far behind A tray of tempting sliced chicken and ham whetted my appetite 'You can prepare your own sandwiches,' she instructed me quietly.

"Then coffee — steaming hot — and olives and pickles. 'Here's the cream for your coffee'. This, just as we came in sight of the winding Platte River.

Gingerbread View

"Then as I stirred my coffee and watched the countryside roll by like great slices of gingerbread and marble cake with spots of greenfrosted muffins, the stewardess was again at my elbow. I almost jumped, for it looked as though she had reached out and grabbed a piece of that very cake.

"Coffee and cake. The whole world to look upon — a dainty stewardess to look out for my wants — what more could I want? We were in Omaha and the first regular lunch 'aloft' had been served.

"After all this, I wondered as I stepped from the plane if a few years hence we might not be drinking milk from the contented cows of the Milky Way or eating sandwiches made from the cheese of the moon itself. Nothing would surprise me."

Since that day in 1930 worldwide air travel has become an everyday occurrence. Men have travelled to the moon. But the 30 minutes I spent eating that first airplane lunch actually heralded a new mode of travel. I feel fortunate to have been the first to eat a lunch aloft!

Cigarets Were 1930 Problem

In a small story next to the report of the first airplane lunch written by Ruth Godfrey in 1930 was this item:

There's never any rest for the cigaret smoker. Now he is being reminded by United States Department of Commerce officials that he cannot flip his cigaret out of an airplane window. It might start a forest fire.

The passengers on Los Angeles-Seattle and Chicago-Omaha-San Francisco routes have been especially warned against violation of this rule, which prohibits dropping or releasing burning tobacco from planes in flight.

Drug Agent Plays Self in 'Luciano'

New York (UPI) — Lucky Luciano once told a prison official, "I never was a crumb, and if I have to be a crumb, I'd rather be dead "

The ex-kingpin of the New York Mafia never was called a crumb — his old adversary at the federal narcotics agency termed him ruthless and a cutthroat.

Luciano suffered a fatal heart attack on Jan. 27, 1962, at Naples' Capodichino Airport, just as police reportedly were ready to close in on his multimillion dollar drug smuggling operation.

Luciano is being resurrected in a movie, Re: Lucky Luciano, by award-winning Italian director Francesco Rosi and starring Rod Steiger as gangster-informer Gene Gianinni, with Italian film star Gian Maria Volante as Luciano.

The film's other major character is Charles Siragusa, a U.S narcotics agent who hunted Luciano for 20 years Siragusa, now retired as deputy director of the U S Narcotics Bureau, will play himself.

"I use non-actors whenever possible," Rosi said

The film focuses on the gangster's alleged post-World War II drug trafficking career, begun when he went into "retirement" in Naples following his deportation from the United States in 1946.

Rosi said Siragusa agreed to play himself in the film to help dispel some rumors about Luciano that painted him in a more kindly light than as a ruthless criminal. Rosi said Siragusa told him:

"All the good things he did, the stories you hear, how he helped the Allies in World War II — all lies He was a cutthroat, a ruthless gangster, a big dope peddler — I detested the man."

Rosi agreed, saying: "I do not romanticize the Mafia The Mafia is power — political power, economic power, social power Power is not romantic "

OUR Little Town Or Our LITTLE Town?

By Gertrude Skinner

Superior

So what's in a name?

A great deal so it seems if one is to interpret literally the heading of these lines — Our Little Town.

A recent critique in the Superior Express in regard to the city of Superior being home base for OLT stated, "All right for Ruskin but Superior, population three thousand (almost) is no little town. Gertrude must think up a new heading."

Not on your Republican River Valley will I change the heading. (Of course, someone could change it for me)

My critic is thinking in terms of population and I'm thinking in terms of personality.

The people of Superior are friendly, concerned, aware — no different than the people living in Ruskin. Personality wise they are identical and that's the highest compliment of which I am capable. I'm in love with both towns and mistress of neither.

Why not keep all good things in small packages? Things like OLT? After all is typed and read these lines are really not That Big.

Superior, population three thousand.

Any other time of the year perhaps but not his weekend. For this weekend is homecoming time in Superior and the population has doubled. Ruskin, too.

Housing is at a premium, hospitality stretched until it twangs in an effort to accomodate those lost souls who have found their way home. Ruskin, too.

Home. Home to family reunions, high school class reunions, teas, receptions, tours, picnics, coffees, visits with old and dear friends. It is a joyous time of remembering, a golden link with the past. Ruskin, too.

Memorial Day. A day of memory shared with those who have gone on before, of decorating the graves of my loved ones who sleep in the eternal peace that is Superior's Evergreen Cemetery — Mama, Dad, Clara, Lou, Hazel, Earl.

And this year there is Ruskin, too, and the peaceful little country cemetery which holds my beloved Eli close within its breast.

How could I not see both towns in the same light?

SF-Cable Cars Up for Adoption

San Francisco — San Francisco is putting 19 of its trademark cable cars up for adoption. It's part of the city's 1973 Cable Car Centennial Celebration.

Custody will be granted on the condition that awardees adorn their bouncing charges in birthday finery fitting the occasion.

Adopters will be selected on the basis of the best decorating schemes and will be responsible for all decorating work.

The 19 applicants who make the grade will have the use of a cable car as a promotional vehicle during their birthday week — Aug. 2-9.

The first cable car made its maiden run down the east side of San Francisco's Nob Hill with inventor Andrew Hallidie at the grip wheel on the foggy morn of Aug. 2, 1873. The ride will be re-created with the original model and a specially built "Centennial cable car" on the 100th anniversary.

Brownville Theater's Four Plays Announced

A four play summer of comedy and mystery has been selected for the 1973 season of the Brownville Village Theater, according to Henry Blanke, director.

The season opens June 30 with the Oscar Wilde comedy-farce The Importance of Being Earnest. The Woody Allen comedy Don't Drink the Water, which pokes fun at embassy life behind the iron curtain, will be added to the schedule July 1

Night Watch, a new Lucille Fletcher mystery which just finished its New York run, opens July 13. The family comedy, The Remarkable Mr. Pennypacker, by Liam O'Brien, opens July 26. It details the life of an ultra-progressive 1890 father who heads not one, but two families.

There are 42 scheduled performances during the summer, with production ending Aug. 19, Blanke said. The last four weekends of the season will have all four plays in production during matinees on both Saturday and Sunday and evening performances both days.

Blanke will gather his 14 member Nebraska Wesleyan University student cast in Lincoln Friday and move the company to Brownville June 8.

Music Festival Has 8 on Faculty

Eight faculty members have been selected for the Brownville summer music festival scheduled for two, two-week sessions, according to director Mrs. Mary Lauber.

The festival will provide intensive training in strings, piano and voice for up to 80 students from 8th to 12th grade, Mrs. Lauber said.

Mrs. Lauber, and her husband, John, both music instructors at Nebraska Wesleyan University, will handle vocal music chores during the sessions which run July 15-29 and July 29-Aug. 12.

String faculty members are Morris Collier, assistant professor at Nebraska Wesleyan; Jay Finlayson, Lincoln teacher; Carol Work, University of Nebraska teacher, and Carole Bean, Iowa Western College teacher.

Piano instruction will be by Joyce Zei, NWU faculty member, and Patricia Will, Omaha.

Real John-Boy Walton Is Author of Series

New York (AP) — As Earl Hamner Jr recalls it, his home town of Schuyler, Va., once was described in a federal writers' guidebook as "a tiny hamlet that rises to mild hilarity on Saturday nights."

His warm memories of growing up there since have become a Thursday night staple called The Waltons, a Depression-era family series that has enjoyed boom times on CBS television.

Hamner, who created the series from The Homecoming, a semiautobiographical novella he wrote 10 years ago, still has a Virginia accent that survived his gradual migration to Hollywood, fame and a certain amount of fortune as a writer of novels and scripts.

He still says "hoose" for house and "aboot" for about. He wears horn-rimmed glasses, favors tweed coats and resembles an English professor whose minor was soft speech.

The oldest of eight children, he always wanted to write.

"From the start, I kept those journals just as John-Boy does in the show," he said. "And when I was six, I had a poem published in the children's page of the Richmond Times Dispatch."

He laughed. "It was about a puppy, and I didn't have a puppy at the time I wrote it. My dad looked at me a bit strangely later."

Hamner, now 49, might be known today as the Rev. Mr. Hamner, had it not been for a minor transgression at the University of Richmond, where until 1943 he was a divinity student on scholarship.

Hamner preferred not to discuss what aborted his future as a man of the cloth. But it was sufficient to get him drafted and shipped off to war just after the Normandy invasion in mid-1944

"My specialty was defusing land mines," he grinned. "The life expectancy of a man who defuses land mines was then about three minutes But I kept following behind the lines, and I never even got shot at."

The Army took him out of the defusing business and put him in Paris, where he stayed until 1946. Then he came home, graduated from the University of Cincinnati, began writing full-time and never stopped.

The Waltons represents the apex of a long, hard career for Hamner, who is happily married, has two healthy teen-agers and two California homes — one in Studio City, the other near the ocean at Laguna Beach.

Paul Newman narrates Wisdom Hath Builded Its House this afternoon at 2 on KMTV Filmed in Rehovot, Israel, on the campus and in the laboratories of the Weizmann Institute of Science, the program reveals the widening potentials of science in such areas as treatment of presently incurable diseases, correcting brain damage, future vaccines specific to multiple diseases, curbing the population explosion, desalination, purification of polluted water and increasing food crops under semi-arid conditions.

Search for Missing

Abduction headlines the Nebraska Educational Television schedule Monday at 7 p.m. when KUON's Opera Theater production of Abduction from the Seraglio is broadcast. This fanciful treatment of Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's romantic opera is based on a Turkish theme popular when he was commissioned by Emperor Joseph II of Austria to compose it in 1782 Set in the palace and gardens of Pasha Selim, a Turkish noble, the opera is concerned with the planned abduction of beautiful Constanze who is being held captive by the Pasha along with her maid and manservant.

5,000 Years of Acupuncture

Pain and its treatment by acupuncture is the topic of Acupuncture: Medicine or Magic, Tuesday at 9 p.m. on KUON (ETV). Since President Nixon's visit to China in 1972, acupuncture, the Chinese art of healing, has met with both enthusiasm and skepticism in U.S. medical circles. The documentary explores this 5,000-year old medical art and current research being done on this treatment.

Experimenting on Man

Most medical experimental procedures begin with animal testing. But animals are not people and the data obtained from such exploration are limited.

The role human beings play in medical experimentation, which has become a subject of controversy in America, will be examined in an NBC Report titled The Ultimate Experimental Animal: Man, airing Tuesday at 9 p.m. on KMTV (NBC).

Aftermath of Civil War

The pain and agony of a dramatic trial unique in American history will be seen Thursday at 7 p.m. on KUON's Humanities Film Forum. The program is The Andersonville Trial, an Emmy Award-winning drama directed by George C. Scott. It is the story of a Swiss immigrant who became the only American ever tried and executed for war crimes on American soil.

The program reenacts the events of a troubled America at the end of the bitter Civil War and the vindictive and violent atmosphere following the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln. The powerful and enduring problems of rival authorities of military discipline and moral conscience are portrayed by a cast including Richard Basehart, Jack Cassidy, Buddy Ebsen, Cameron Mitchell, William Shatner and John Anderson. The Andersonville Trial will repeat Saturday at 2 p.m.

Contrasting Life Styles

Two Family Portraits: The contrasting life styles of two American families — one from the middle class, the other in the upper middle class — will be presented in successive one-hour segments on KOLN and WOW (CBS) beginning at 8 p.m. on Thursday. We're OK in Brick, N.J. focuses on a middle class family that left the city for a "safer" life in a new environment, where many residents are living a little better life than they can actually afford. The second portrait . . . but what if the Dream comes true? also focuses on a family who decided to move to a larger house in a more exclusive neighborhood

Nuclear Power Plants

A Born Actress

"A deaf person is a born actor," says Linda Bove, a young actress who has been deaf since birth.

Miss Bove, who plays Melissa in a newly-created role in Search for Tomorrow, daytime serial seen Monday through Friday at 11:30 a.m. on KOLN and WOW (CBS), explains that, in general, "we use our hands and body to communicate, just as a hearing actor would have to do in a stage portrayal."

The young actress has five years of stage experience, thus far, having joined the National Theatre of the Deaf in 1968, when it was formed. While attending Gallaudet College in Washington, D.C. — the only liberal arts college for the deaf in the United States — she was discovered by David Hays, director of the group.

Now, with 12 national tours, six European trips and numerous special awards for theatre excellence behind it, the National Theatre of the Deaf plans future expansion, while Miss Bove continues to communicate, in her own special way.

Writers On Strike, Carson Stands In

By Jay Sharbutt

New York (AP) — Johnny Carson, whose business it is to make people laugh, didn't appear happy at all. It was 2:30 p.m. and he had less than two hours to finish writing the night's monologue.

Shortly after 5:30 p.m., when NBC starts taping the Tonight Show in New York, he'd be in studio 6-B, starting that monologue and hoping the audience would laugh its collective head off.

The writers with whom he collaborates on the show belong to the Writers' Guild. The guild was on strike and so were they. And Carson had become the solo scrivener as well as the star.

He sat behind the desk in a spacious NBC office, jotting down ideas for the monologue. He looked as carefree as a hungover reporter told to analyze the new city budget 10 minutes before deadline.

It appeared a bad time for an interview. He was polite, but wasted no words. During pauses in questions, one got the feeling a gnome was going to pop up with a sign that said, "What next, dummy?"

Two nights earlier on the show, Carson had mentioned that being interviewed always made him vaguely uneasy. He was asked about this later.

"I guess it's because often the things you way wind up out of context," he said. "I think sometimes it's because of the concept the writer has of you and I can understand that.

"Sometimes the guy is trying to get a rise out of you, and I do that myself now and then on the show."

The show, which Carson has hosted since October, 1962, left New York for beautiful downtown Burbank, Calif., in May last year. It was making a three-week return visit here when he was interviewed.

Why did he move the show to California?

"Well, 17 years ago there was quite a bit of entertainment coming out of New York," he said. "You had the Sullivan show, Garry Moore was on, there were a lot of variety shows.

"There was a certain excitement here, but then it started dwindling and everything started moving out to the Coast. I just thought it was time to move there.

"And frankly, the studio facilities in Burbank are much better. This place (NBC's New York studios) wasn't designed for television."

The 47-year-old performer, who often is kidded about his frequent vacations estimates he did nearly 170 of the shows last year.

Each time, he was expected to be funny and make people laugh. He admitted the strain of the show occasionally gets to him "and that's why I sometimes will take a long weekend, a three-day weekend."

He's been doing the show more than 10½ years. When does he think he'll quit?

"Well, I wouldn't continue the show if the ratings dropped and if the people stopped watching," he said. "When are you through? It's like Jimmy Durante says, the public will tell you when you're through."

Another consideration, he said, "is if I felt I wasn't able to keep the show fresh."

What for him is the biggest worry in life?

"I think it's keeping your mental energy to a certain level, doing things that stimulate your mind," he said.

How does he accomplish this?

"I try not to take the show too seriously," he said. "You can't let it become an all-consuming thing, which is easy to let happen. You have to have other interests. That's why I like to get away from time to time."

It was time for the reporter to get away and let Carson go back to work on his monologue.

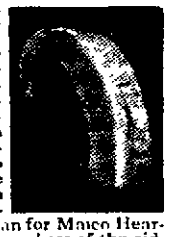
MICROPHONE IS LIKE 'EARDRUM' IN NEW HEARING AID

Minneapolis, Minn. A new hearing aid just introduced is expected to offer more usable power, superior sound reproduction, and be more trouble free, thanks to a new development in hearing aid microphone design.



Called the "DrexEL," the small behind-the-ear type aid features a microphone which simulates the human eardrum to solve one of the most common hearing aid problems. A spokesman for Maico Hearing Instruments, makers of the aid, explained the advantages of the new microphone.

"The most delicate part of a hearing aid has always been the tiny "link," finer than a human hair, which connects to the microphone diaphragm. In the new microphone, this link has been replaced by a membrane, which might be compared to the human eardrum."

The new microphone's lack of sensitivity to mechanical vibrations is expected to result in one very important benefit for hearing aid wearers, aids may be used at higher volume settings without annoying feedback squeal and distortion.

Unique Ceramic Display At Sheldon

By Helen Haggie

Some of the most unusual ceramic pieces seen at Sheldon Art Gallery, 12th and R, on the University of Nebraska campus, are on display until June 10.

Tony Martin, art instructor at Chadron State College, uses such ingredients as salt and wood ash in the glazes of the most decorative pieces.

The use of different ingredients gives a variety of textures, as well as color, to the pots.

There is an oriental hint in the large jars which range from 8 to 45 inches in height.

A handsome oval bowl about 18 inches in length has touches of wood ash in the glaze.

An eye-catcher that would enhance any room is a set-pitcher and tall goblets.

Martin received a bachelor of science degree from Kent Ohio State University and a master of arts from Illinois State University at Normal.

He has had art exhibitions in Ohio, Wisconsin, Indiana, Wyoming, Colorado, Illinois, Kentucky as well as other galleries in Nebraska.

MUSIC

Different Drummer: First Black, Second Female

By Duston Harvey

San Francisco (UPI) — Elayne Jones is a different drummer — a black woman tympanist with a major orchestra.

It's been a long struggle against two prejudices and it isn't over yet, says the 44-year-old kettledrum player who joined Seiji Ozawa's San Francisco Symphony for the 1972-73 season for her first year-round orchestral job.

"Being black is worse than being a woman in everything except baseball, football and basketball," she said.

"I had to prove that music could be played by anyone who loves it. And I never let anything stand in my way It's been a terrible burden because I always felt I had to do better, that I wouldn't be allowed the lapses other musicians have. It's still true even now."

Elayne Jones is a short, lithe woman whose Afro shows a few specks of gray now, more than two decades after she graduated from the Juilliard School as a classical percussionist and started her professional career in New York.

"Everybody wanted me to play in a jazz band," she recalled after a rehearsal at the San Francisco Opera House.

Instead, she became the first black and the first woman to play with the New York City Opera's orchestra, where she was tympanist for 22 years.

She also played her kettledrums with Leopold Stokowski's American Symphony and the New York City Ballet, performed as a percussion "extra" with the New York Philharmonic and Metropolitan Opera, played in the pit at Broadway musicals, taught at Bronx College and Westchester Conservatory of Music, worked resorts and tutored youngsters in piano and drums.

Along the way, Miss Jones, 44, a divorcee, raised her three children and collected a shelf full of tennis trophies

Her frenetic life of part-time jobs finally ended last fall when Ozawa, music director of the San Francisco Symphony, selected her out of 40 applicants for tympanist and she moved west

"I get so annoyed at conductors," the diminutive drummer said. "They take one look at me and think 'Oh, a girl And a black girl at that.' Right away, they think, 'She can't do it' And when we're finished — maybe it's my imagination — they seem to look at me and think 'Gee, she did a good job' — like they can't believe it"

Her conviction that being black is more of a detriment in orchestral circles than being a woman is based on a look at the symphonies she has played with.

Elayne Jones

"Look around," she said. "How many blacks and how many women are there in this orchestra? I'm the only black, but there are several women. And it's the same with other major orchestras.

That's why I'm not excited about women's lib. When a white woman moves ahead, it's no guarantee that she will open doors for black women. I have to identify with black people."

Her identification and some college teaching in black studies five years ago produced changes in her attitudes toward her race and classical music.

"Sometimes I feel as a black musician I enjoy music more than white musicians," she said "Black people have a history of music that's much closer to their daily life than the average European music.

"People used to say, 'All blacks have rhythm' and I thought they were chauvinistic. But when I taught music history at college, I found that rhythm does come from Africa . . . that it seeped into European music from the Afro-Asian countries.

"So now when they say it, I don't feel it's uncalled for. I just say, 'You're right'

"Up until five years ago, I felt guilty about playing in a symphony orchestra. I believed no black had ever done anything musically outside jazz . . . that there was no black Beethoven, no black Brahms, no black Wagner. Now I know Africa has a great history of music, but that it's not written down."

She tells black youngsters who reject "white music with no soul" that the symphonic repertoire is not entirely European, that Bartok and Stravinsky took ideas from Africa and the French impressionists made direct steals from Asia "Then they listen," she said.

Behind her row of kettledrums, striking the leather-topped tympani with sticks whose felt heads she wraps herself, Miss Jones tried to put "soul" into her own music and thinks she succeeds.

"I'm doing what I want to do," said the Harlem-born musician who expects to be beating the drums in San Francisco for the symphony and opera for some time to come.

BOOKS

Jones Lays It On With Heavy Hand

A Touch of Danger. By James Jones: Doubleday.

He calls it A Touch of Danger, but the author of the 1950s classic From Here to Eternity lays it on with a heavy hand.

Whereas the best of them whet the appetite, Jones' initial effort satiates it. One wants a touch of danger, after all. A hint of it running through a mystery. The edge is lost when it's applied too thickly, when the touch of sex or danger becomes a glob to be hurled at the reader on each succeeding page.

Jones' hero, cast in something of the Joe Mannix image, is a private detective approaching 50 and needing money to support a newly acquired alimony habit and a pair of daughters attending ritzy eastern schools.

James Jones

Lobo Davies, who spends half his time hunting up the missing children of rich but insensitive parents, is vacationing when the story opens. He has about as much depth of character as Mannix, and, like Mannix, he attracts danger.

Packed off by a grateful client to the obscure little Greek island of Tsatsos, he spends the first 350 pages moving from fight to fight—like Mannix, again, brushing danger at every turn, likely or not.

Yet, paradoxically, nothing happens. Jones goes on and on describing sexual encounters and tough-guy fights while the plot thickens with the maddening slowness of a pudding that requires constant stirring.

The elements of intrigue are there, a tiny island preoccupied with its tourist trade and peopled by middle-aged moneybags and youthful hippies. Together they're a miscellany of weirdos among whom everyone is suspect.

Yet the plot makes only plodding progress, as if everything about it were sunbaked and dormant. Geared down to the pace of a vacation isle's off season lull, it very nearly succeeds in dulling rather than arousing curiosity.

Nine-tenths of the book consists of sex and violence, offered in approximately equal parts, each dished up in turn in ever richer doses and leading precisely nowhere except to a bottle of scotch and sleep.

It's only in the last 50 pages that Jones seems to have made up his mind to write a story. The pace quickens perceptibly at that point and the pieces begin falling into place as the inevitable conclusion rushes out to meet the newly marshaled facts.

As in all good suspense drama, the ending includes an effective surprise element.

Where he writes with intelligence, creating a situation and establishing relationships and meaning—that is to say, at the conclusion—Jones is good.

He is less brilliant where he is intent only on painting colorful portraits of people who apparently are supposed to come across as bigger or better or more beautiful — whatever — that real life.

There's more to suspense fiction than beds and guts and more to people—even a Lobo Davies—than the overdrawn tough-guy sketch would imply

Lobo, Chantal et al. deserve better treatment than they got from their creator Had they received it, Jones' readers would have been better served, too.

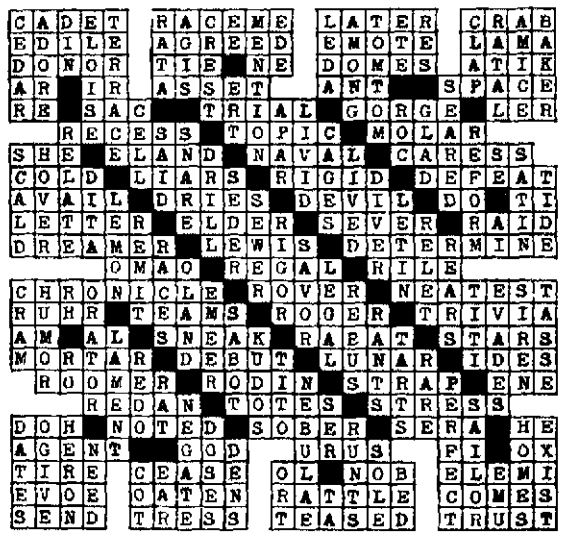
Solution of Today's Puzzle



Our Global Thermostat Is in Trouble

Must the Seas Die? By Colin Moorcraft; Gambit.

The question, asked by a man who has studied the sea and its problems since boyhood, seems to be answered by him: "No, they don't have to but they might unless John and Johann and Ivan and Juan do something."

He tells, in the book's index, what you can do. He might make a concerned environmentalist out of you.

Taking parts of the "global thermostat" which is the world's ocean, Colin Moorcraft calls the North Sea "the industrial cesspool of Europe," the Black Sea "the largest stagnant basin in the world" and the Caspian's condition "shocking."

The glop is hard on fish — and birds. Trouts pout. Puffins are puffin'.

Dang it, Man, stop discharging your sewage into the sea!

The practice is growing of dumping industrial wastes from specially chartered ships into the ocean — and this practice menaces life on continental shelves and coastal areas to a "disturbing extent," Moorcraft writes.

Genoa's beaches are so polluted that anyone foolhardy enough to use them is advised to get tetanus and typhoid shots.

Eye infections caught from the surf at Waikiki are becoming increasingly common.

The only pocket of pristine health lies in the remote center of the Indian Ocean, according to Moorcraft.

Any hope? Yes.

The author says British rivers are becoming cleaner and that if existing legislation were stringently applied, U.S. water pollution could be reduced to a fraction overnight.

The ocean could become one of man's greatest assets if he would only let it. It contains enough food to feed a large proportion of the present population of the world, says Moorcraft.

He notes that much potential arable land is not now being used, that land is being wasted on nonfood crops (wine, tobacco, etc.) and that low-yielding, unproductive crops are widely grown.

He praises:

The Chinese — for contributing surprisingly little to the pollution of the Pacific.

The Eskimos — for the careful way they remove food from the sea, using the entire length of the food chain.

The Swedes — for building a toilet which converts human wastes and organic kitchen wastes into a compost rich in fertilizer.

A Scot Portrays America

Manscapes: An American Journey. By Colin Henfrey; Gambit.

Burns was right. "To see oursels as other see us" is a gift.

Colin Henfrey is English, not Scottish, but would that Americans could see themselves as he has seen them.

After a period of study at Cornell, Henfrey struck off across the turbulent America of a few years ago, keeping a diary all the way.

From it has come Manscapes, a collection of vignettes and observations rich in beauty and insight.

There are no sweeping generalizations or conclusions. If Manscapes has a message, it emerges quietly, mostly in the words of Americans themselves. The book reaffirms that America is diversity, dreams, and a harsh reality that often doesn't match the dreams.

People often open up to strangers. To this natural advantage, Henfrey added an obvious empathy for people of all ages and lifestyles, along with a tremendous ear and memory for the varied speech of America (or else he carried a tape recorder).

What he saw and heard any of us could, if we had fresh sight and open minds. The Indians of Kansas and Dakota, the aged of Chicago, a dying Shaker colony, a black evangelist, Cesar Chavez' volunteers, the children of Watts, the young everywhere, and pollution and bigotry (Henfry traveled with his black wife).

All of these Henfrey encountered, and thus encountered dignity and pain, frustration and searching, materialism and cynicism, hope and determination and compassion. America, in other words.

Henfrey's geography is uncertain. He places Pennsylvania in the Midwest, Illinois in the West, the Ozarks rather far north, Kansas City — THE Kansas City — in Kansas.

But would any of us do better trying to plumb the heart of England? Such confusion is forgivable in a stranger in our midst, if not in his editor.

As far as people are concerned, Henfrey knows where he's at, and that's more important.

A Large-Scale Spoof

The Great American Novel. By Philip Roth; Holt, Rinehart & Winston.

Maybe not The Great American Novel, but certainly the most laceratingly comic American novel Philip Roth or anyone else has written in years. The Great American Novel may have been a literary lodestar while this was still a nation of innocents. Today it is a myth tattered round the edges which Roth has turned into a target of ridicule.

His new book is a satire on the American dream in general and on the national pastime in particular, and finally — in and of itself — on the Great American Novel.

We can see now that Roth has been working up to a large-scale spoof of this kind for some time. If his half-dozen earlier books proved anything at all, they proved that his true metier was humor — but sharp-toothed, barbed, satirical humor that had you squirming as you chuckled.

Here it is directed not against a hapless Portnoy but against all of us: sports fans, politicians, anti-Communists, lovers, missionaries, you name it. In accomplishing same, Roth has ridden roughshod over cherished ideals and traditions, using the form to ridicule the substance. Where we cheer, he jeers. It is all fiendishly, irreverently clever.

Take the form as a starter. Roth unabashedly calls his book The Great American Novel, opens with the parodied phrase "Call Me Smitty," and launches into a long prologue that is a marvel of cunning wordspinning.

The Great American Novel obviously needs a great theme, and what greater than the national game, baseball? Roth is bent on ribbing certain aspects of the game — the bean ball pitchers, the tycoon club owners, the statistics-mad sports writers, and so forth. These and more are presented in a now defunct major league, the Patriot League, which flourished until World War II.

Roth pulls off the considerable feat of inventing this league, its competing clubs, and its highly eccentric stars. Their names are also eccentric, like the rookie pitcher Gil Gamesh, who used his fast ball to silence an umpire he didn't like, or Frank Mazuma, the club owner who used midget players (does that remind you of anything?) to make a buck.

Philip Roth

How did an entire league happen to go out of business? That's the gravamen of Roth's satire.

He is positively protean in the way he uses word play and ideas to wrench the familiar into the grotesque, and you have to be on your toes to catch his allusions, for this is a novel where anything goes. Not, mark you, in the esoteric style of Nabokov, who takes pleasure in befuddling his readers, but in a manner anyone can appreciate.

To take one example, when a Christian missionary in Africa is about to be cooked for trying to change the rules of baseball, the angry tribesmen chant "Omoo, Omoo" and "Typee, Typee." Get it?

Real-life characters are brought onstage to be kidded, as in the chapter starring Ernest Hemingway. Roth seems to relish having "Hem" put an Amer. Lit. student from Vassar roughly in her place.

This writer is so prodigal with his ideas all through the book that it is useless to try to pick out nuggests from his wildly abundant narrative. Having crafted the form — a theme with incredibly fertile variations —Roth proceeds to dazzle us with baseball expertise, political satire, national paranoia (the House Un-American Activities Committee gets taken apart), and sheer wordsmithing of a high order.

For once the blurb gets it right: "It is clearly a book that could only have been written by the comedian of Portnoy's Complaint, the satirist of Our Gang, and the fantasist of The Breast." Had Roth written the blurb himself, he could not have summed up the book more acurately.

But a word of warning: though this is not a baseball book, it is a novel about baseball, and the curmudgeonly few who don't know the game or dislike it may find themselves in terra incognita.

It has been said that the legendary Great American Novel must by definition be about the archetypal American hero. What Roth has given us is the archetypal American non-hero in a parody of the Great American Novel.

This seems to be far more apposite for our time, especially since we have long possessed the Great American Novel. It was written by the author of Typee and Omoo.

Rock Star Wunderlick Bombs Out

Great Jones Street. By Don DeLillo; Houghton Mifflin.

Reading books generally provides entertainment, enrichment or education. Sometimes one merely enjoys a particular style of writing.

Great Jones Street by Don DeLillo does none of the above, as far as I am concerned.

It took weeks to plod through the first few chapters of this relatively small book and weeks and weeks more to force myself to continue reading it.

The story centers around Bucky Wunderlick, a rock music star who drops out of the tour and goes off to find himself.

Nothing really happens. Wunderlick walks around his apartment, makes love to Opel when she's there and watches person after person go in and out of his room.

All of the conversations seem the same, so it must have been as much of a bore to Wunderlick as it was to me.

The rock musician appears to be an amateur psychologist who specializes in big words The whole idea is preposterous — in addition to being boring.

Horrible Realities of Child Abuse

A Silent Tragedy: Child Abuse in the Community. By Peter and Judith DeCourcy; Alfred Publishing Co.

A Silent Tragedy is a horror story — a true one.

All but two chapters are case histories of child abuse.

It is a book about a minority whose members are regularly humiliated, beaten, mutilated, sexually abused and sometimes killed.

It will make the reader sick.

Not only the abuse, but the timidity of those who know about children being abused: corrupt prosecuting attorneys, judges influenced by political factors and the undying myth that parents somehow have some kind of divine right to custody of their children.

The authors recommend improved reporting procedures, determination of fact by a jury, and legal counsel for the abused child.

They also suggest that better-qualified persons serve as juvenile court judges; that child abuse hearings be held in open court, with the press admitted; that philosophical assumptions concerning the rights of parents be reexamined; and that alternate types of care for abused children be explored.

Children are not pieces of property. They are human beings. A Silent Tragedy makes one wonder why that fact has been so obscured.

In NEBRASKA

Who? Where? What? When?

Something is coming apart at the seams, by design.

Last Week's Picture

Although this photo was taken about 1912, it doesn't require an oldtimer to recall this "upper dam" on the Big Blue River above Crete. Originally owned by the Crete Mills, it was intact until 1951 and would still be backing up water except for a bypass which was dug then at its north end. It was felt the bypass would protect the northern part of the city from future flooding.

The dam had been used both as a power source and to provide boating and other recreation through two lakes it helped to form. Both the so-called "mill pond" and Tuxedo Park Lake dried up when a dike washed out in a disastrous '51 flood. They have never been restored.

100 years ago this week — Old NEBRASKA

1873: Charles W. Seymour of Nebraska City was appointed deputy United States collector of internal revenue for Nebraska.

The City Council discussed salaries of city employes. There was a difference of opinion as to whether $480 a year was enough for the street commissioner and if $1,000 was too much for the marshal.

90 1883: A J. Sawyer presented the GAR two trees for each soldier's graves in Wyuka.

A fire broke out in the Boyer meat market just as volunteer firemen were going to church. They put out the fire, but damaged their Sunday clothes.

1893: Various artists praised the design of the Nebraska building at the World's Fair in Chicago.

70 1903: A 10.72 inch May rainfall had resulted in floods in Nebraska. The water near Lincoln was receding slowly and the ground was so waterlogged that railroads were having difficulty maintaining schedules.

Richard L. Metcalf of Lincoln was recommended by William Jennings Bryan for a post as a member of the Philippine Commission.

50 1923: Lincoln golfers had organized a new country club and were looking for a site for their course.

Lincolnites subscribed over $100,000 to the Greater Doane campaign, an effort to build up Doane College at Crete.

40 1933: Two hundred farm youths were expected for the annual 4-H week at the Ag College. L. I. Frisbie supervised the program.

Dr. A. R. Mitchell, 77, first dean of the University of Nebraska, died.

30 1943: A buffalo calf was born at Pioneers Park, the sixth to be born at the park in three years. The birth raised the herd to 11 buffalo.

The Legislature adjourned, ending a 103-day session during which 236 out of a proposed 446 bills were passed.

20 1953: The city's Power Advisory Board held its first meeting. Members included R. E. Campbell, chairman; Richard A. Jay, George E. Proudfit, Burnham Yates and Francis J. Minard.

10 1963: Willa Cather became the second person to enter the Nebraska Hall of Fame. A bust of the novelist was placed along the east hall of the Statehouse central lobby.

The first full-time mayor of Lincoln, Dean Petersen, took the oath of office along with new City Council members.

Last Week 1973: Three thousand preregistered delegates, 2,000 Nebraska-resident, registered visitors and hundreds of others attended the biennial national convention of the American Baptist Churches in the U.S.A. at Pershing Auditorium. Dr. Peter H. Armacost, president of Ottawa (Kan.) College, was chosen ABC president-elect.

The Nebraska National Guard's usual caravan to Colorado Springs for summer training was cancelled to save motor fuels. A few Nebraska service station operators reported they were "out of gas" or nearly so. There was concern for farm operations and travel plans.

'Go Big Red' Folklore Next?

Humor Much a Part Of Pioneer's Nebraska

By Opal Y. Palmer
Special Writer

After the Pre-Emption Act of 1841, territorial pioneers staked squatters claims on the plains of present day Nebraska. But when President Lincoln signed the Homestead Act in 1862, historian Addison Sheldon tells in Stories of Nebraska, that wagon trains filed west with happy homesteaders singing:

Come along, come along, make no delay.
Come from every nation, come from every way.
Our lands they are broad enough, have no alarm
For Uncle Sam is rich enough to give us all a farm.

Many of those who settled in Nebraska were not farmers. They gave up. Many who had been farmers found the Nebraska plains and Sandhills so difficult to cultivate that they, too, gave up their claims and moved on to Colorado and Wyoming.

Homesteaders who remained to brave the blizzards, the drouths and the grasshopper scourges, added their bit to a heritage of fun and folklore by spoofing their way of life, the fleas, the bedbugs and the weather.

A favorite pastime was making up riddles. James N. Tidwell, in A Treasury of American Folk Humor, gives a popular one:

"What runs over the fields all day, comes home at night and sticks its tongue out from under the bed?" Answer: A wagon.

Tidwell also gives a remedy for flea bites: Paint the entire body with melted tar. When fleas try to bite they get stuck in the tar. (Much as Uncle Remus' Br'er Rabbit stuck himself to the Tar Baby!)

Then, there was this bedbug which a settler took to an iron founder. He dropped the bedbug in a ladle of molten iron and had the iron moulded into a skillet. The settler's wife used the skillet for 20 years. One day it fell and smashed. The bedbug walked out of its snug crypt and marched upstairs to his former place in the master's bed.

Making parodies to humns sung in church when itinerant preachers came, was another source of fun. One parody recorded in Nebraska, the American Guide Series, was sung to the tune of "Beulah Land."

I've reached the land of drought and heat
Where nothing grows for man to eat;
For wind that blows with burning heat,
Nebraska land is hard to beat.

Success was not neglected. The Guide Series gives another rhyme for the "Beulah Land" tune:

The corn we raise is our delight,
The melons, too, are out of sight.
Potatoes grown are extra fine
And can't be beat in any clime.

Cowboys and migrants stopping for the night or for a week in hospitable shacks peopled by males, had to earn their board. Guests found "Commandments" such as the following, posted in prominent places:

He who eateth the food washeth the dish.
He who drinketh the water carryeth it from the well.
He who cooketh the food choppeth not the wood.
Thou shalt maintain a full woodbox sayeth the cook.
The wheelbarrow shalt be thy servant.

Mari Sandoz records in Old Jules, a pessimistic rhyme which was carved on the door of a shack near Chadron in the 1890's.

30 miles to water
20 miles to wood
10 miles to hell
And I gone there for good.

Modern Nebraskans keep folklore humor alive today by making prominent Nebraska citizens and state visitors, "Admirals in the Nebraska Navy."

It seems that a young naval recruit was quizzed by his commander.

"What would you do," his commander asked, "if you saw a battleship coming across the prairie with its guns trained on you?"

"I'd sink it of course."
"What with?"
"With a torpedo."
"Where would you get the torpedo?"
"In the submarine."
"Where would you get the submarine?"
"The same place you got the battleship, Sir."
